PRIDAY MAY 1, 1888. PRINT TO INDIAN CORN.

The morn soon is he for the most valuable one grown in the country. It is cultivated over a larger extent of territory, thrives well under various degrees of latitude and relurus more money to the agricultural community than any other cercal. How important, then, that the land on which it is cultivated be me-chanically and chemically prepared draining and sub-soiling-deep, thorthen the seed put in at the right time in a proper manner, and the after culture timely and thorough.

The sipring has been late, but a sca-sonable time for core planting in the Middle and New England States, is from the tenth to the twenty-fifth of May. There is nothing gained by planting this crop before the soil is warmed up; before the temperature is sufficient to make the seed germinate rapidly. The source of heat is from the sun; as no soil will absorb much solar heat when saturated with water. Hence, there is nothing gained in planting corn before evaporation has carried off the Spring rains, and the temperature of the soil is sufficient to expand and germinate vegetable seed. But when the season is reasonably advanced, and the land is dry and warm, yet in your corn without delay. Late planting makes late harvesting; and as there are only one hundred to one hundred and twenty days between Spring and Autumn frests, "delays are dangerous,"

One of the most important things in planting corn is therough ploughing. No true farmer will dispute this. Corn roots extend over a large surface, and will seek food from all portlons of the soil broken by the plough. Again, many seasons are subject to droughts and that, generally, is at the time when the ears are maturing. A safe-guard against drought is a well drained soil, subsoil ploughing and frequent culture of the growing crop.
We prefer the inverted soil, Spring ploughed, if a dry, mellow soil. If a stiff clay land, we should have ploughed it last Fall, so that the Winter frosts could ald in breaking it up; giving it time for the sod to rot and mingle with the soil. Some grass lands are very tenacious-such as the blue grass, on limestone land in the Middle States. On alluvial atouzhed land in New Eugland, or on most loose soils which co tain considerable organic matter. Spring ploughing answers, and generally need not be broken up much before the time of planting. But remember this great fact, no soil can be made too mellow, nor be kept too mellow during the growth of the crop. As to the best way to apply manure, there is a diversity of opinion. It is im possible is give instructions applicable o all sections. A great deal depends on the land cultivated; a fertile soil will do well with curface manuring; more cold, sterile isne requires some stimulant in the hills—super, poudrette or super-phosphate, in addition to stable manure. In surface manuring, experience teaches these facts. /If manure is apread on a light, andy, or loamy soil, we should turn it in deeper than on a naturally moist or wet soil. Manure decomposes oner near the surface—also acts on the growing crop sooner—but whether manure is buried three or six inchess below the surface makes but little difference on naturally warm and well-oultivated soil. Corn crops will find all fertilizers, at either/depth, long before harvest.

As to modes of planting, we are firmly in favor of having the rows to run North and South; laying the land off in two directions, at right angles to each other, and planting where the furrows cross each other. For small varieties of corn, three and a half feet apart for the bills, but for the larger varieties of corn, four feet is better. All corn must be far enough apart to run the plough and cultivator, and to give access of light and heat to the soil. DAVID MCREARY. JOHN F. MCREARY The absorption of the manure and plantfood are thus equalized. Besides, the cultivation of the crop is made more perfect, the soil is broken, stirred and pulthis system-of-cross-ploughing or cultiva-ting at right angles. Grass-and weeds tright angles. Grass-and weeds the more perfectly avadianted than this system-of cross-ploughing or cultivating at right angles. Grass and weeds

Bones and Ashes.—Bones and sales such through the housekeeper's hands severy day. Wood is still the chief fuel in the farm-house, and the value of ashes is pretty well understood. They are prized for the lye they yield, and if there is a surplus from the soap making they help the kitchen garden at the back door. The bones are generally thrown to the deared leaf. We will be de door. The bones are generally thrown to the dog and lost. Now, if the careful housewife would save the bones as regularly as the ashes, she would practice a wiser economy and help her kitchen garden twice as fast. Bones are worth twice as much as ashes for manure, if dissolved, and the ashes will reduce them Put both into a barrel in the celiar, if you please, and after mixing them, keep them constantly moist with soapsuds, the hotter the better! The sud should not be poured un in such quantities as to leach the ashes. In a low onths the bones will be disintegrated, and the whole mass may then be mixed and will make an excellent fertilizer for the figwer border or kitchen garden.

Mose IN ORCHARDS.-We cut the folleving from the Bural American: We Have in mind a New England orchard that was used for a hog pasture for more than twenty years, and for aught we know, had been shed in like manner for many years provious. The frees were giants in their line, and a crop of fruit annually a sure thing. From that or chard a worm caten apple was a rarity. The long is the best outlivator, and the best insect remedy that can be put into an apple orchard. We know it from Gettysburg, May 15, 1884. many years provious. The trees were best insect remedy that can be put into an apple orchard. We know it from more than twenty years of observation. After the stems of the trees have attained a size of three or four inches in diameter, hors, will do the trees no injury. The demestic fowl—hens, chickens, &c., will also do good survice in the orchard, whether apple, cherry or plum, for they are always willout indulging in the thieving propensi-

PRICE REDUCED TO $56.66 PER TON.

IMHE URE OF THIS GUANO in Maryland for a several years for Corn, Tobocoo and other spring trops, as well as for Wheat, has established its excellence. It possesses all the quickness of Peravian Guano, with permanent qualities not possessed by that article.

Experience has shown that this Guano ripens the Wheat crop from See to six days earlier than the Super Phospinates. It also ripens Tobsecon. The Pacific Guano Company has authorized the shower reduction in consequence of the depressed condition of the farming interests in the Southern States. It is the purpose of the Company to farmink the best fertilizer at the lower price, which they are able to do by reason of their large capital and inclities. The Guano is warranted same in quality as heretofure soid by us.
