Mother knelt down beside me as I sat on a low stool. She put her hands on my shoulder and looked in my face. "She did not refuse you?" she said. "Boy, I know you are in trouble. I'm your mother. Tell me." "Bhe did not accept me," I said. "The haughty minx !" said my mother. "I ——" Then she burst into tsars. "And that's to part us?" she said. "Not if you'll go with me," I answer- ed. But she could not leave her home, and I went alone. In the frosty morning, as I turned to look back at the little village, from the top of the old stage. I saw the little children filing in at the school house door, and caught a glimpse of Hepsey's dreas beyond; only a fold of her dreus, but I knew it. The school bell was ringing; bat it did not asy "turn again" to me, as it should have done, had I been such a prophet as Whittingtes. I made my fortune. I had a cousin	from his antrgonist's face, and holding them up to the minister, said: "What do you suppose his wife will say when she sees him #" The minister silently went his way a saider and sager man. "JOHN," said a gentleman to his ser- vant, "I am going to church, and if it should rain. I wish you would come with the umbrells for me; however, you need not come unless it should rain downright." The gentleman went. It did rain; but John had gone to the other end of the town to see Mary. His mas- ter came back with drenched garments, and a look of implacable anger. "John," said be, "Why didn't you bring the um- brella?" "Because, eir," replied John, "It rained slassing." REV. J. K.
