CATTLE DISEASE.

Great excitement has existed for some weeks past in the princi-pal cattle markets, and along the thoroughfares leading to them, on account of a dreadful scourge which has raged among cattle. "This excitement can hardly be wondered at, says the Prairie Farmer, "when it is estimated that $300,000 will not pay the losses in Champaign county alone," in Illinois, within a comparatively brief period. The disease, after all the investigation given it, is attributed altogether to the introduction of Texas cattle, which, strange to say, exhibit no indications of the disease themselves. Another important fact, which leads to the hope that the scourge will be imited in its effects is, that it is not limited in its effects is, that it is not communicable from cattle that take it from the Texans. Those and those second best best stallion between 3 and 4 years. from the Texans. Those and those only that travel in the same track, and feed on the same pastures, or are put into the same enclosures with the Texas cattle, take the disease, and its course, it may be hoped, will be a

Another important fact is mentionon of the disease does not affect either ering under it-a comfort to such as may be ignorantly obliged to consume he beef, which since the appearance of the disease in Illinois, has been run off to market in great quantities. Professor Gamgee, Principal of the

Albert Veterinary College, London, being in the West when the disease roke out, has given it special attention, and makes a report to the Pork Packers, Association, Chicago, from which we quote the following: "The farmers of our country would call this disease 'black water.' It is very similar to the 'darn' of Aberdeenshire, and it has been described as occurring in various parts of Europe. There are, however, some very important features in the outbreak we are at present studying, and it is essential I should state distinctly that which I consider to be matter of fact, and distinguish this from what at present of a tolerably decided character can aiready be formed.

In the first place, the maiady follows the track of Texan cattle, and is not found beyond. The Texas cattle are themselves healthy, and we have failed yet to see a diseased one. Native cattle do not communicate the disease to other native cattle, and sucking calves continue to sucking the disease. In one case a calf suckied its dam until the contracting the disease. In one case a calf suckied its dam until the contracting the disease. In one case a calf suckied its dam until the contracting the disease. In one case a calf suckied its dam until the contracting the disease. In one case a calf suckied its dam until the contracting the disease. ting the disease. In one case a calf suckled its dam until the latter died; it was then placed with a cow that also died, and lastly, with a third one that succumbed too, without indicating the slightest symtons of ill health.

Secondly, I consider that there is no specific animal poison causing the approach of the disease. It is not specific poison to see the fire received in the calf.

Best pull over 3 years, best in under 1 year, best best per company of the disease. It is not a pull the disease. no specific animal poison causing the spread of the disease. It is not a malady belonging to the class of true plagues, or epizotics; it has a local origin, from cattle grazing on certain lands in Texas, and if you took eattle South and grazed them where the South, and grazed them where the Texan steers enjoy perfect health, from being acclimatized and account tomed to peculiar pastures, you would find the cattle of the North dying in best the South, as they are doing at present the best to be the south to be the best to be the best

It is not an uncommon circumstance or animals, which are themselves iealthy, being the carriers of disease-producing elements, though there is something unusually virulent discharged by the Texan herds, and discharged only during the summer deared only during the summer wenths.

forms of anthrax, or carbuncular ferers, which originate spontaneously where there is insufficient heat on illdrained, retentive soils, and widely over the marsh lands of Central, Seathern and Eastern Europe.

But, gentlemen, it is a consolation to know that there is not the slightest danger of any evil arising from the drinking of the milk of the slock cowa, and I should have no seruples in eathern productions. and L should have no seruples in eating the flesh. They are not poisoned by any specific virus calculated to do injury to men or animals, and in lay-ing before you a theory of the origin of this disease, I am strengthened by facts which I have gleaned during inestigations of similar disorders in

About spring time and early sum mer, in all probability, the Texan cattle eat, as our own do in some parts of otland, the young, succulent shoots of peculiar trees, highly charged with astringent pinciples. On unbroken ground, highly charged with moisure, and adjoining wood lands, there are, as the hot weather sets in, many things sprouting, which animals will not touch later in the season; and in the motts of Texas there is the live oak which grows in the Gulf States, where indeed cattle are reared which have been known in times past to disseminate this disorder, for the cattle of Florida are as dangerous north of a rertain line, as the steers of Texas. From this peculiar feed, therefore, the animals get their systems impregnated with materials which do not destroy the stock accustomed to a special living in a given latitude, but which being thrown off in the urine and in the state of th ne of my agricultural papers, that en the straw of the growing wheat, and to a certain extent prevent it rome lodging. I resolved to try the experiment. I made a mixture in the proportion of two parts (weight) of ime to one of sait. I permitted the nixture to lie in the heap some three r four weeks before applying it. I be hen spread it over a part of a field at be he rate of a ton and a half to the acre. The result was, that in that part of he field, my wheat all stood well, while in the remainder it all went lown before the heads were entirely lifed. I need not tell you how much hied. I need not tell you how much maker the former was to cut than the atter. The yield was decidedly better, and in addition to these advantages, I found the clover, on the part to which the mixture had been applied, larger and finer than where it had not intent. Nat.
