TREATMENT OF CLAY LAND. I had a patch of hard clay land in one of my fields, containing about S half an acre; it was so hard we could not plow it with two horses, and when Lif it was plowed it came up in large lumps from one foot long to three; the harrow-would bound and bounce over T it, and you could not see where it had been; we could not plant it for the at lumps. It was a source of trouble and vexation to me, and I determined to do something with it, so I went to the HIGHEST PREMIUM paid on GOLI Then I drew on a large amount

C work. I put a large blind drain through the middle of the patch; this L'b was my main drain. Then I ran from Ab the main drain small ones each way, twenty feet apart, to the outside of the g, clay patch. I laid in two inch drain of corn cobs and coarse manure; then it summer fallowed; then in the fall, I e drew on a large amount of well rotted a manure, and sowed wheat, and it was r to by far the best wheat I had in the field, r sand I never saw any clay lumps to en speak of in the patch. It was the best hree land to plow that I had, and raised the hen largest crops; and I am satisfied that if farmers would drain and manure their clay lands heavily, it would richhkly pay them for the trouble and ex-, ie pense, and be a saving in horse flesh Itland harrow teeth .- Cor. Country Gen-O ANIMALS THAT CHEW THE CUD. Ilin Rominating animals gather their nin food rapidly, give it a few cuts with notice teeth, and swallow it. It goes to Than interior receptacle, where it is hramoistened; this is very essential if it ertribe dry hay. When the animal has in a filled himself, he masticates the food ele thus stowed away in his stomach, rais using it cud by cud. When a portion is a completely masticated, it rasses to another receptacie, and the process of a digestion goes on. Thus an ox, if left in T to himself, will raise and masticate all is phis food thus stowed away in his stomrach. If he be pushed and worked i i hard, and does not have time to mas-(titlcate, he falls off in flesh, his health is w poor, his digestion incomplete. The horse, on the contrary, however in much in a hurry he may be, must masititicate each mouthful before he swalhe flows it. A hungry ox let into a mead-ne good will fill himself in twenty minutes, while a horse would want at least an hour and twenty minutes to take the is not amount of grass. The ox, deer, at heep, goat, chamois and rabbit being 1 In the natural prey of feroclous beasts, safe endowed with the extra stomach in awhich hastily to stow away the food pwithout mastication. This may, perhapa, be regarded as a wise provision gof nature, enabling them to sally forth awhere the food is plenty, and in a ofshort time fill themselves and retire to da place of safety to ruminate their food C sat their pleasure.-Er.

A GRINDSTONE should not be exo posed to the weather, as it not only in-o jures the woodwork, but the sun's rays harden the stone so much, in time, as should it stand in the water in which it runs, as the part remaining in the water softens so much that it wears un equally and "out of true."
