neming und Sousekeeping.

PREDING WITH PROFIT. In feeding stock, as in feeding land, igment and good management are ulred. If any one supposes that he resort to a system of temporary Mining as a substitute for constant at ntion and regular feeding through e year, let him learn at once his mise. Nor will feeding alone be suff erant, even if prudently attended to, bless cleanliness and ventilation, e to the animal's comfort and wel ing, be looked after. ativPigs," says an English paper, "en-by the reputation of having a real ing for dirt, and certainly the way which they are kept on some farms lobs of all kindslows that their owners are determinto give them opportunities for carryout this liking. No notion can, wever, be more erroneous than this, none is certainly so productive of ss to the keeper. Let any one not invinced of this, try the two modes T keeping-the dirt and the cleanwe food in both cases, and other gen mfal treatment, being the same, and wo is best in the end."

So that besides good and regular eding, pigs must be kept clean, notithstanding their reputation for love filth-a reputation which is misunparistood, as any one might know who ould observe their cleanly habits hen they have room enough allowed

Then, a great deal depends on the erave them feed profitably. A careful opanager adopts this method. A large withouse is enclosed at the two sides. aved, and sprinkled over with burnt sy, and ashes obtained by burning Deeds. In this the pigs are fed; bile for resting and sleeping they nave a compartment railed off at the ther end, and which is amply provi-Sed with clean straw.

of Straw if allowed to get damp and ne ouldy, is very apt to engender Des the animal to keep his skin thorn lightly clean. The manner in which ace is housed give him comfort, cleanerondition for his well doing. As to the feeding, the same care which y oks to the animal's comfort in other spects, will see that he is not half incarved through a portion of his exisance and stuffed for the rest. vil The most profitable feeding is that hich is fairly distributed through his bundantly fed with good food, so that se may grow and faten continually aind make the best of every day he leves. It is a mistake to suppose that whery abundant feeding is necessary to meep up this steady, continual growth. The same quantity of rich and fatten-ing food is used much more advanta-Reously given in moderate quantities helrough a longer period of time.

he It has been especially remarked of meet cattle, by the most experienced interiors, that any attempt to force by noxtravagant feeding, is so much waste lyf food. A feeder who practiced carenul weighing of his fattening cattle porvery week, found that a daily supply f four quarts of barley meal to a fine Geer gave a weekly increase in weight, Beveraging eighteen pounds. A neighinight quarts were accordingly fed dailoss than when he received four per twelve quarts per day, he gained negothing at all. This is not a solitary niese, for it is sustained by the experi-hence of intelligent feeders, that a mon-thrate supply of food, given at stated ve of flesh and fat than attempts at lothe philosophy of it is, that in this f ase a large portion of the food passe poludigested, and the organs, from bepulg over taxed, may become incapable the digesting enough for the proper Let it not be supposed, then, that,

Gr land or animals, extravagant exmuenditure can be substituted for careidal, every day management. HOME-MADE MATS.

OWA lady correspondent of the Fermonia hermer gives the following directions com r making mats from the smallest bits cloth left after cutting out clothes preparing the materials for rag car-: Pieces over an inch square are large, so it can easily be seen that way of making rugs will use up e picces otherwise of no account greept for the rag bag. These and e edges being raveled out so as to awesent a soft furry appearance, and alound and sewed like the braids in graided mat; it will be difficult to disxinguish it from chenile work. In rein iss,' in which you use all colors indisindiminately, as they are most conveniprost, has often a very good effect, if enty of bright colors are used; in a y other case it is too apt to have a prengy look. Decided contrasts or
