

Paris, Garden and Household.

Woods and garden, certainly, a great deal of progress has been made in the preservation of valuable timber trees. When ever a certain tree is to be cut down, it should be carefully examined, not only as to its value, but also as to its utility, and if it is found to be of any use, it should be preserved, and if it is found to be of no use, it should be cut down, and the wood should be used for some purpose.

It follows that it would not be profitable to keep trees for the fourth year, as their produce would not pay for their keeping. It may be said that a valuable wood would be saved.

It is also to be noted, the first thing that comes to the mind, is that a bright colored tree, such as a red maple, is irregularly shaped, and is not a tree of any great value. It is also to be noted, that a tree of a bright color, such as a red maple, is irregularly shaped, and is not a tree of any great value.

OUR FOREIGN LETTER.

On the Rhine—A Famous Cave—On Lake Zurich—A Curiosity in Art, etc., etc. At 10 a. m. we drove to Bad Slesau.

The ravine through which we drove by the banks of the river Tamina, was probably produced by the same convulsion of nature that made the fissure through the mountain at the Via Mala, though on not so grand a scale. Here the waters of the Tamina are but a few feet below the level which has been excavated with but little trouble from the hills; while there, at the bottom of an abyss, flows the Rhine, whose depth denotes its tumultuous roar.

The Indian Archipelago. Amongst the numerous islands of the Indian Archipelago islands inhabiting the Twelve Thousand Islands of the Indian Archipelago were those tribes devoted to the exciting pursuit of piracy. It must not be supposed that the pirates were confined to the coast.
