of honest men in favor of honesty and reform, against Hartranft and the Cameron ring robbers. That Rev. Mr. Weyl had the undoubted right to show his preferences for the ring thieves and illuminate the Presbyterian paragon in honor of them, we do not deny; but whether it is proper for him, as a minister of the gospel, to make himself thus conspicuous in politics, and on the side too that has had of almost every honest man turned upon it, we do question. It is just as proper for him to take the stump for Hartranft and defend Evans and Cameron and the other robbers, as to illuminate his house in honor of them. We further question whether it was becoming in him to show his hand in a demonstration of spite against his distinguished townsman and neighbor, A. G. Curtin, upon his arrival home, and after an absence of three years, in a foreign land, where he served as American minister with honor and credit.

The radical demonstration on Friday evening would never have been held, had Mr. Curtin clung to and defended the corruptions of the Hartranft-Cameron ring, and because he chose to stand upon the side of honesty, and oppose the gang which is plundering the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, was this demonstration of spite gotten up.—It was bred in spite and ill-will, and we are sorry that a minister of the Gospel, whom we always held in esteem, should help to cover over corruption by the dare of an illumination, gotten up by a cabal of selfish politicians who are attempting to stab Andrew G. Curtin.

The stage war-bill, on Saturday had the following note: "15,000 men in town. This shows how Curtin stands." W. W. Brown.

It is said that when a man is drunk he sees double, and as Brown was double tonight on the night (Friday) of their meeting, his estimate of the crowd must be exaggerated by four.

This is the way senator Hendricks puts it in one of his late campaign speeches in Indiana: "Support" and "elect" the senator, "that I am going to be elected governor in October, see election should present me with his best blooded horse. You would think that horse; yes; but if I were to accept that horse you would think that I were a man working in party traces may be compelled to conform to the requirements of his position, and we can only judge him fairly when he speaks for himself, without terms and without trammels of any kind speaks for himself."

General Butler, though voting sixty times for Jefferson Davis in the Charleston convention, is admitted by his present political friends to be a man of great ability and individual responsibility for what he did in party traces, and yet Mr. Greeley is to be held responsible not only for what he has said in the same relations, but for all that his numerous associates have said in the same relations, and which he was often absent from. The fair way is to look upon Mr. Greeley, not the New York Tribune, as before the public for the presidency and to take him when he stands out from his party, segregate him from the party, and let him speak for himself, and let his own interests or the interests of his party be regarded as his own interests or the interests of his party as when, in his famous article of November 27, 1866, on "The True Basis of Reconstruction," he sacrificed his prospects for a United States senatorship in behalf of principle, and in the same relations, as early as 1865, the day after Gen. Lee's surrender at Appomattox, Mr. Greeley published a leading article in the Tribune, headed "Magnanimity in Triumph," in which he expressed the fierce passions of the hour, he expressed himself as follows:

"We had hoped to print herewith the president's proclamation of amnesty and oblivion to the partisans of the rebelled rebellion, and we do not yet see it. It is a ticklish thing for me to come as a delegate to a democratic convention. I can't get used to it, and I have to keep a close watch on my tongue to keep from exposing myself."

Another delegate, R. K. Cummings of Shelby county, Ohio, being dunned for a bill, acknowledged his impure condition, and admitted "I am a member of the Klan." "I used to get it from him, but I don't get it from him, I can go up to the postoffice or custom-house and get it."

There are now twenty-five murderers in the Tombs, New York, awaiting trial. A citizen in Alabama has a hantam chicken which catches rats and holds them until they are killed. A fire occurred at Milwaukee, Wis., on Saturday night, which involved a loss of $10,000.

During the radical torch-light demonstration, at Bellefonte, on last Friday evening, Rev. Wm. L. Presbyter, a minister of that town, had his house illuminated, to show his sympathies with the purposes of the demonstration that evening, namely: G. Curtin, because he chose to join the ranks
