President Grant had been treating Gen. Hancock very, very micanly all along, and banished him to the remotest and most isolated frontiers out of sheer spite, and contrary to the rules and usages which apply to a soldier of Gen. Hancock's rank. Gen. Hancock submitted to all this shabby treatment without a murmer. It is one of the little and discreditable things in the life of Gen. Grant which he now would gladly wipe out, and
