Will you allow me to propound one or two questions for your consideration, which have been induced by reading in the agricultural department of the Weekly Tribine of Jan. 8, some experiments by a Pennsylvannia farmer in regard to liming land. Says this correspondent: "I have found exactly the same results on strips of land it rested with lime and wood askes alternately." Now, then, lime being an alkaline substance, or largely so, will not plants, in the absence of potash in the soil, make use of lime as a substitute, and use it with equal effect. Common sails in the 28th of March, 1772. The contrast it presents with the papers of the make of lime as a substitute, and use it with equal effect.
