It is proposed to better preserve ams, bacon, and the like, by encom-assing them with an impervious coat-tossed out to the sidewalk as she was passing them with an impervious coat-ing of specially prepared paper. After killing, the swine are hung up in a tem-perature of forty degrees for thirty-sir, fours; then packed in ice and salt dur-ing twenty-four, and afterwards in brine for the same length of time. After this they are sprinkled with saltpetre and coarse salt, and allowed to lie for seven packed bodily in salt. After this pri-limin days, For another seven days they are packed bodily in salt. After this pri-time until she went to the Twenty-sec-nd street police station she and her children slept in the hallway of the ten-them, and paper made pliable by soakalum is then rubbed over and upon them, and paper made pliable by soakthem, and paper made pliable by soak-ing in alum water is closely pressed upon them, forming a close, and it is elaimed, practically impervious cover-ing, to exclude the air. But it is doubt-ful if this paper covering will serve as good a purpose as that formed of melted paraffine, and used with fair results in preserving fresh beef from rapid decay by keeping it away from the contact of the atmosphere.
