

To a Rose.
Rose of the morning, in thy glowing beauty
Bright as the stars, and delicate and lively,
Lift up thy head above thy earthly dwelling,
Daughter of heaven!

Wax! for the watery clouds are all dispersed,
And I my king! I'll tell you how
Yeak! for the watery clouds are all dispersed,
And I my king! I'll tell you how

All are departed, and Parnassus breathes
Welcome thus smiling.
Rise in thy beauty!—Will thou form a garland
Round the fair brow of some beloved maiden?
Pure though she be, unaltered temple never,
Flow'ret shall wear thee.

Thou shouldst be wreathed in coronal immortal—
Thou shouldst be flung upon a shrine eternal—
Thou shouldst be twined among the golden rings
Of the pure Virgin.

In Absence.
Though spices lure me, and the rose-tree draws
Its heart of fragrance to beguile the sense—
Though warm air woo me, and the healthy gales
Intense—
Though sunbeams ravish with their blue and gold
And amber mists enshroud the tropic zone,
Love grows a-weary, and my heart a-cold,
Alone!

Thou, my darling, come again to me,
Nor linger longer on the far-off shore;
Between us stretches the cruel sea,
No more.

Long to clasp you in a fond embrace,
And tell you, tell you with my every breath,
I ne'er again will miss you loving face,
Till death.

A LEGEND OF THE RHINE.
The beautiful river Rhine, in some of its windings, is not unlike that portion of our Hudson which flows through the Highlands. But it differs vastly from the latter, in that the grand old hills and immense rocks which form its banks are covered with ruins of what were once massive towers, castles, and strong-holds. These towering battlements, perched upon jagged rocks and steep mountain passes, were the homes of warlike knights and barons of olden times, whose lives were spent in con- tinuous struggle against each other. To all these ancient ruins throughout Germany, as well as on the Rhine, are attached legends and stories of romance, which are as old as the hills and valleys of the world.

Richard was born in Oxford, and in 1189 succeeded his father, Henry II. It is said that his haughty spirit and unbending will hastened the death of the old king. Partly from remorse for past misconduct, partly from martial pride, which early in his reign had become a passion, he determined to subvert the throne he had inherited from his father. He was a second crusader, and he led the famous Saladin, Emperor of Egypt and Syria. Saladin had wrested Jerusalem from the hands of the Christian knights, and Richard had sworn to slay many of his followers. News of this disaster reaching England, Richard determined to regain possession of the holy city. The Duke of Aquitaine, the fortress of St. Jean d'Acre, which yielded a siege of two years before, which Richard had taken, and which he had given to the Duke of Burgundy. Richard had time to regain possession of Jerusalem, news reached him at sea, and he was informed that the Duke of Burgundy, who had been a traitor, had fled to the Duke of Aquitaine, and had taken with him the Duke of Burgundy's treasure. Richard, who was a man of a high and noble nature, was determined to do nothing but what was right. He was a man of a high and noble nature, and he was determined to do nothing but what was right.

FRED. KURTZ, Editor and Proprietor.
VOL. VI. CENTRE HALL, CENTRE CO., PA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1873. NO. 34.
Terms: $2.00 a Year, in Advance.

A Village Farmer.
The story as it was told to us.
In one of the small villages, less than twenty miles from New York lives a farmer, who he may be so called, who has only eight acres of tillable land, and a few acres of swamp land devoted to corn and potatoes. He is a man of a high and noble nature, and he is determined to do nothing but what is right.

Chasing the Antelope.
From the many knolls which lay in our path, we saw the antelope, and we were determined to chase it. It was a man of a high and noble nature, and he was determined to do nothing but what is right.

A Mexican Story.
The story of the Mexican woman who was determined to do nothing but what is right. It was a man of a high and noble nature, and he was determined to do nothing but what is right.

The Lobster Business.
How Lobsters are Caught and What is Done With Them. The lobster business is steadily growing in importance, and it is becoming a man of a high and noble nature, and he is determined to do nothing but what is right.

Sensations in the Papers.
We have just taken up at random one of the New York daily papers. Of course it contains the usual standard captions such as "Horrible Murder," "Awful Casualty," "Unknown Suicide," etc.

An Egyptian Plague.
The threatened grasshopper invasion. A telegram from Iowa announcing the presence of a large army of grasshoppers on the wing will not be pleasant news to the farmers of the American West.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.

Why are handrails like guide-books?
Because they are made for two wits.