AUDITOR GENERAL TEMPLE. The tax-payers have no need to regret the election of a democratic Auditor General, last fall—thus far Mr. Temple has shown himself the right man in the right place.

Now, during these long summer days, the State Treasurer has been engaged in one of two labors, either arranging to protect himself or defend his party.

We cannot comprehend, the honest tax-payers will never understand why so simple a matter as the showing how much money is in the Treasury, how much received, and how much disbursed could not be ready for honest examination.

Now, during these long summer days, the State Treasurer has been engaged in one of two labors, either arranging to protect himself or defend his party.

Mr. Spigelmeyer's debts are only one-fourth of the sum named, and that the indebtedness of the State Treasury is owing to the fact that his obligations, amounting together to about $50,000, and which were given by Widdens and Spigelmeyer to John C. Metz, of Centre county, on the purchase of a mill property at Woodward, and were abundantly and properly secured by Mr. Metz in that property.

THE CONVERSION OF JUDAS. Judas was one of the Twelve. He was the son of a man named Simon, and was a native of Bethsaida, a small town east of the Jordan. He was a man of a certain and avaricious man. He was displeased with Mary, who had anointed him with ointment, but he did not care for the ointment, but the money. The Savior's remark on the occasion, was not a doubt, a provocation to betray him at a future time, and as soon as an opportunity offered it was ready to be seized.

His sorrow. The sorrow was after, when Judas saw that Christ had been crucified and slain, and that he would be crucified and slain by his own hands. He was sorry that he had sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver, and that he had betrayed him for a few pieces of silver. He was sorry that he had sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver, and that he had betrayed him for a few pieces of silver.
