Thin Seeding of Wheat.

The first instance we shall adduce as to thin seeding, says an English paper, is that of Jethro Tull, who, about the motiled soap to one gallon of water. beginning of the last century, occupieda farm of two hundred acres of his own, which he enlivated on perfectly novel large flat brush, so as not to form a principles, the first and foremost of froth or lather on the surface. The which was, "that thorough tillage is competent, with or without manure, to come dry. Mix a half pound of alum ure the profitable growth of any with four ounces of water; leave it given species of cultivated plant year stand for twenty-four hours, and then ven species of cultivated plant year ter year in succession." This theory apply it in the same manner over the coating of soap. Let this be done in coating of soap. Let this be done in dry weather. His farm or farms consists of about six hundred acres, a considerable portion of which consists of "down" land, having from form to give to give the city, in Connecticut and from four to six inches of soil lying on in Wisconsin, while there has been no a chalk subsoil. It is unnecessary to go at length into the system adopted by Mr. Hallett, whose object is to produce a quality of wheat founded, like cattle, on an authentic pedigree. His system embraces thin seeding as a first princi-Thus, sown early, one hundred are seeded at the rate of one rate of one city in part, to the dullness of business, bushel to six acres, while the latest sowbushel to six acres, while the latest sow-ing is one bushel per acre.
