an ally on the flank of the empire, in case of another French war, and the absolute want of interest of Germany in whatever happens on the Danube, together with certain public indications, all make this more than probable. Still, this alliance may mean nothing perilous to the peace of Europe. It may merely pledge the German empire not to interfere in the projects of Russian ambition.

The point upon which the whole posi-

The press of Vienna of all parties, echoes the cry: "No war! no occupation!" Such a policy would be opposed to all the traditions of the empire. It would be dangerous both within and without. It would recall to Austrian statesmen that joint occupation of Holestein, which ended in Sadowa. It might merely be taking the Russian chestnuts from their own fire. It would be an alliance and occupancy very expensive and very perilous. Still, on the other hand, it must be said that Russia, Geralliance and occupancy very expensive and very perilous.
