

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

How it appears from an unbiased point of view...

I never until this fall realized the debt we owe the press, and I never appreciated the advantages of living in a country that elects its own rulers.

When William came home that night he was a little more than a week behind, and there was a glow upon his brow and a light within his eyes I hadn't seen before.

The next morning, when I passed through the sitting-room, William sat shivering over a closed register.

Democratic victories everywhere, the country was in a glow of rejoicing. Intense excitement and rejoicing.

What do you think this morning about my having a new clock, William? Of course you can have a new clock, if you use one.

I felt a good deal of anxiety about family affairs, William isn't a professor. Father leads devotions, and I was afraid I would be too ignorant to pray.

William had taken out a blank check, and was reflecting, when in whisked the president of the Democratic club and said Florida and South Carolina had gone for Tilden, and William was wanted down to the club room to see about the illumination.

That evening a shade of anxiety—a severely perceptible trace of melancholy had settled on William's face.

Winter Fashion Notes. A great many tortois appear on all the new suits.

Cornet-like blues of ribbon and lace are worn in the new costumes.

One of the newest fabrics is camel's hair, interwoven with feather down.

Some of the latest importations of Paris are of the color of the plover, with a blue and white check pattern.

The most fashionable costume at the moment is a catagen loop or waterfall of the color of the plover, with a blue and white check pattern.

By-and-by it was reported that electors' names had been omitted from Republican votes in certain States.

It was said that a certain Senator had been elected in the State of Louisiana.

When I was in the city of New Orleans, I saw a man who was a member of the Louisiana Legislature.

The childhood of Vanderbilt was spent amid scenes of toil, frugality and rigid simplicity.

De. Smiler, says Max Adler, had a large tank placed on the top of his bathhouse from which to supply him with water.

Then the doctor got out circulars and published advertisements about "Smiler's Patent Health Lift."

One day, however, Mr. Magnus, who had been consulting at the health lift every day for months, broke the board upon which he was standing.

Ashtabula and Angola. The scene of the terrible accident on the Lake Shore railway is many the miles south of that of the Angola disaster.

At what all these enjoyments he never indulged in, but he was a man of affairs, a bookkeeper, cashier and clerk.

His ideas expanding. In the second period of this remarkable career, he indulged more in the comforts and enjoyments of life.

With all these enjoyments he never indulged in, but he was a man of affairs, a bookkeeper, cashier and clerk.

THE HYPERIONS OF A RAILROAD KING. There came a third period—the grand period in which he became the great stock operator of the world.
