

A DREAMER OF DREAMS.

A Chicago woman relates her remarkable experiences—How dreams are reliable or unreliable—How she has been deceived and how she has been saved.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean prints a communication which says: I was every person who reads this to understand that it is the plain, unvarnished truth. Being natural, I should commence with children's dreams. Of course they are more foolish and harder to understand than grown persons' on account of the immaturity of their minds. I was never a child, but I have a deep meaning. My dreams were always hints, or more properly, significant of the future. My oldest sister was aware of this. She would say to me, "What is that?" I told her I dreamed brother came home and left his boots. She seemed excited, and sat down and wrote him a letter, telling him to come home immediately, as some great danger threatened him. He replied to her letter, made his notes of her warnings, and came home. It was some of her "old woman's notions."

Mark what followed. In about six weeks he was brought home a corpse, and I was told that he had died of typhus fever. I will relate another of my sister's dream. A little boy, four years old, dreamed he was a man's head lying on the floor. Some time after a man died in the same room after a lingering illness.

The dreams of some persons are not reliable. Persons having weak minds and crooked ways could not expect to dream straight. I have several unbelieved in dreams come mainly from this cause. When we moved to Illinois my husband wished to purchase a span of horses. He was very anxious, and in various stages of decay, were brought and represented as sound and without blemish. In every instance I was deceived. I was told that they were sound, and that they were sound, and that they were sound. I was told that they were sound, and that they were sound, and that they were sound.

Next, a schooner named C. J. L. was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked.

We take the following exciting episode from a work called "A Year's Homecoming in South America." It is a story of a man who was captured by a tribe of Indians. He was taken to a hut, and there he was kept for some time. He was treated with kindness, and he was allowed to see his family. He was told that they were well, and that they were well, and that they were well.

There are some human tongues which have two sides, like that of certain quadrupeds, one smooth, the other very rough. I have seen a man who had such a tongue. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind.

He who writes against the abuses of the age in which he lives, must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread.

There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past. There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past.

A submerged city. A strange discovery is reported from the Lake of Geneva, Switzerland. A tourist having lost his trunk, two divers were employed to search for it. While they were below water they found a city, which was supposed to be a village, since covered by the lake. This statement led to an investigation of the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.

KANSAS HILL ON GRID.

How He Cleared a Platform When He Was Struck. The Chicago Times says: C. J. L. Cook, who is in the city, is a remarkable man. He has served under the flag of the United States, the Confederacy, and the United States. He was a member of the 11th Illinois, and he was a member of the 11th Illinois, and he was a member of the 11th Illinois.

Next, a schooner named C. J. L. was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked.

There are some human tongues which have two sides, like that of certain quadrupeds, one smooth, the other very rough. I have seen a man who had such a tongue. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind.

He who writes against the abuses of the age in which he lives, must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread.

There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past. There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past.

A submerged city. A strange discovery is reported from the Lake of Geneva, Switzerland. A tourist having lost his trunk, two divers were employed to search for it. While they were below water they found a city, which was supposed to be a village, since covered by the lake. This statement led to an investigation of the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.

Eating too much and too fast; swallowing unperfected food; drinking too much fluid at meals; drinking poisonous viands and other intoxicating drinks; keeping late hours at work; wearing clothing too tight, so as to relax the circulation; wearing shoes; neglecting to take exercise; neglecting to keep the body warm; neglecting to wash the feet sufficiently to keep the pores open; exchanging the clean clothes worn in the warm room during the day for costumes and exposure to wind; eating irregularly; starting the stomach to work by eating a cold dinner; wearing a heavy coat in the summer; wearing a light coat in the winter; wearing a heavy coat in the winter; wearing a light coat in the summer.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.

SEVEN WEEKS IN A SMALL BOAT.

The Voyage of Capt. Crapo and His Wife. A correspondent of the London Daily News at Ponce, speaking of the arrival at that place of Capt. Crapo and his wife, who left New Bedford on May 28 in a small boat, says: The voyage was commenced on May 28, when the vessel left New Bedford, but by stress of weather she was obliged to keep the coast. She was driven to the westward, and she was driven to the westward, and she was driven to the westward.

Next, a schooner named C. J. L. was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked.

There are some human tongues which have two sides, like that of certain quadrupeds, one smooth, the other very rough. I have seen a man who had such a tongue. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind.

He who writes against the abuses of the age in which he lives, must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread.

There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past. There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past.

A submerged city. A strange discovery is reported from the Lake of Geneva, Switzerland. A tourist having lost his trunk, two divers were employed to search for it. While they were below water they found a city, which was supposed to be a village, since covered by the lake. This statement led to an investigation of the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.

Eating too much and too fast; swallowing unperfected food; drinking too much fluid at meals; drinking poisonous viands and other intoxicating drinks; keeping late hours at work; wearing clothing too tight, so as to relax the circulation; wearing shoes; neglecting to take exercise; neglecting to keep the body warm; neglecting to wash the feet sufficiently to keep the pores open; exchanging the clean clothes worn in the warm room during the day for costumes and exposure to wind; eating irregularly; starting the stomach to work by eating a cold dinner; wearing a heavy coat in the summer; wearing a light coat in the winter; wearing a heavy coat in the winter; wearing a light coat in the summer.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.

AN Exemplary Convict.

An incident worthy of notice occurred at the State Prison at Jefferson City, Missouri, on the morning of the fourth, says the Indianapolis (Ind.) Journal. Ten years ago a boy sixteen years of age was sentenced to ninety-nine years imprisonment for killing his employer, Jim Linn, who was a poor, ignorant, and lawless man. He was poor, ignorant, and lawless. He was poor, ignorant, and lawless.

Next, a schooner named C. J. L. was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked.

There are some human tongues which have two sides, like that of certain quadrupeds, one smooth, the other very rough. I have seen a man who had such a tongue. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind.

He who writes against the abuses of the age in which he lives, must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread.

There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past. There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past.

A submerged city. A strange discovery is reported from the Lake of Geneva, Switzerland. A tourist having lost his trunk, two divers were employed to search for it. While they were below water they found a city, which was supposed to be a village, since covered by the lake. This statement led to an investigation of the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.

Eating too much and too fast; swallowing unperfected food; drinking too much fluid at meals; drinking poisonous viands and other intoxicating drinks; keeping late hours at work; wearing clothing too tight, so as to relax the circulation; wearing shoes; neglecting to take exercise; neglecting to keep the body warm; neglecting to wash the feet sufficiently to keep the pores open; exchanging the clean clothes worn in the warm room during the day for costumes and exposure to wind; eating irregularly; starting the stomach to work by eating a cold dinner; wearing a heavy coat in the summer; wearing a light coat in the winter; wearing a heavy coat in the winter; wearing a light coat in the summer.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.

GIVEN AWAY.

A NEWLY-WRITTEN copy of each of the following books is given away to the first person who sends a card to the publisher, and a card to the publisher, and a card to the publisher.

Next, a schooner named C. J. L. was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked. I was told that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked, and that it was wrecked.

There are some human tongues which have two sides, like that of certain quadrupeds, one smooth, the other very rough. I have seen a man who had such a tongue. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind. He was very kind, and he was very kind, and he was very kind.

He who writes against the abuses of the age in which he lives, must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread. He must depend on the generosity of the few for his bread, and the malice of the many for his bread.

There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past. There are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past, and there are some faults that have been committed in the past.

A submerged city. A strange discovery is reported from the Lake of Geneva, Switzerland. A tourist having lost his trunk, two divers were employed to search for it. While they were below water they found a city, which was supposed to be a village, since covered by the lake. This statement led to an investigation of the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities, who were told that they were to investigate the spot by the municipal authorities.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.

Eating too much and too fast; swallowing unperfected food; drinking too much fluid at meals; drinking poisonous viands and other intoxicating drinks; keeping late hours at work; wearing clothing too tight, so as to relax the circulation; wearing shoes; neglecting to take exercise; neglecting to keep the body warm; neglecting to wash the feet sufficiently to keep the pores open; exchanging the clean clothes worn in the warm room during the day for costumes and exposure to wind; eating irregularly; starting the stomach to work by eating a cold dinner; wearing a heavy coat in the summer; wearing a light coat in the winter; wearing a heavy coat in the winter; wearing a light coat in the summer.

The Blue and the Gray. An interesting fact attending the recent outbreak in Louisville, Ky., which was at once followed by the enrollment of nearly a thousand citizens for the protection of the city, was the service side by side of ex-Federal and ex-Confederate soldiers. Ex-Secretary of War, John Morgan's most daring lieutenant, and ex-United States Marshal E. H. Murray, the youngest brigadier in the Union army, commanded one of the hastily mustered companies, while Major E. A. Richards, who served under General Lee, commanded the other. The two companies were ordered to march to the front, and there they stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks.