The Eastern States.

Some Interesting Facts is Relation to the Population of New England.

Nathan Alleu, in an address before the Social Science Association, gave the following interesting information concerning New England people and changes in population in the Eastern States:

According to the census of 1870, 615, 747 residents of other States were born in New England. Another marked change consists in a migration from country to was a many throughout New England. Closely consists in a migration from country to city, or from a small place throughout New England. Closely considered with a change of residence is a change in pursuits; in fact, a removal from county to city, or from a small place to a larger one, almost necessarily implies such a change. Prior to the present century, the prevailing business of New England people was agriculture. The lightest, sweetest, most wholesome and delicious Vienna rolls, tea biscuita, bread, muffing family of America for twenty report of 1875 gives these facts in respect to the number engaged in the following pursuits:
