sort, but which, on a nearer approach, turned out to be two human heads stuck on poles about a yard and a half long.
One was the head of a man in the prime of life, apparently about thirty-three years of age, with a black mustache and a beard of some weeks' growth. His Bosniaks, with the exception of a long tuft on the crown. The other was a man much older, about fifty-five years of age. His face was thin and clean shaved, his head was also shaved save the same long tuft which forced in the wind.

Round this ghastly sight the children danced and yelled like demons. After they had paraded all the street they stuck them on a wall opposite the pasha's residence and subjected them to every species of insult, each boy advancing in turn and spitting on the heads and then hurling some mud. They retired utter-ing horrid blasphemies. During this time the street was thronged with sol-diers, and I saw many officers looking on with evident pleasure. On expressing my disgust to my companion he said: "It was nothing; such sights were rather
