

The Conduct of Life.

Do good that will do it.
Loving soul and our strength to the deed;
Let us pierce the hard rock and pass through it,
And compass the thing that we need.

LOUIE'S SUCCESS.

"I can't see where we will do with her. She's a delicate, sickly little thing, and hasn't either the strength or the desire to earn her living as the rest of us do."

THE FALL OF KARS.

How the Strong Turkish Troops Were Taken by the Russian Carrying the Fort by Assault.
The New York Herald gives this account of the capture of Kars, in Asia Minor: The fortress was captured by about fifteen thousand Russians, who climbed the steep rocks, ramparts and walls, and followed an equal number of desperately fighting Turks in a headlong flight over their ditches and parapets.

AN OPERATOR'S JOKE.

Shortly after the Atlantic cable was proposed, a success, and cablegrams were sent to the capture of Kars, in Asia Minor: The fortress was captured by
walls, and followed an equal number of
desperately fighting Turks in a headlong flight over their ditches and parapets.

On that day, loving promise William had heretofore quietly rested until gradually the demon of jealousy crept among his true love for Louie until his heart, torn by the never-failing memory, in some way or other, of Clandine Hamilton's name, William could no longer endure it, and he upon receipt of a letter from Louie, saying that her next would be from London, where she would remain a fortnight, William made up his mind to go to London for the same fortnight, and devote all his energies to finding the girl he loved, and who so persistently kept herself from him.

And so, one stormy night in early Autumn, it happened that William Dayton, who had been for some time in London, returned to New York, and was met at the depot by a young man who had been waiting for him. The young man, who was dressed in a military uniform, and who had a military bearing, introduced himself as Colonel Kars, and said that he was the son of the man who had been waiting for him.

Nothing more was heard from the message until the end of the month, the time for squaring accounts, when Colonel Kars, who was then in New York, received the following telegram from the treasurer at New York:
"Come down with the dust."
For the life of him he did not know what it meant, and telegraphed back to New York asking for information.
