THE DAISY'S PROPHECY.

"Rich man, poor man, beggar-man, thief, doctor, lawyer—there Julia, my late is at last decided. Three times the daisy has said to me to marry a lawyer."

"I don't know where you ever obtained that notion," said Julia, "but I have never seen a daisy say anything of the kind."

"You are very young," said Kate, "and there's the square of your face. I am sure you will find a lawyer who will suit you."

Matching a Pattern.

One of the fascinating young men in an uptown dry goods store is in trouble. It is the custom of the establishment to discharge a man who fails to sell to one of three successive customers.

Next morning the young man who had been discharged returned to the store. He was dressed in a suit of the latest fashion.

"Who is he?" asked the clerk. "He is the man who was discharged yesterday. He has come back with a new suit."

"I don't know where you ever obtained that notion," said Julia, "but I have never seen a daisy say anything of the kind."
