

Life in Tangiers.

The first appearance of the long-haired... certainly not a cheerful one to late... journey at Gibraltar. The visitor... himself, or rather he... by guide himself, or rather he... praising wares. The shops are... a degree. Those in the only square... around which are the various signs... are wreathed. Here is the well-defined... shore upon which the semi-barbarian... breaks a path, and, as the visitor... the rest is all barbaric—a dead sea... of unknown extent.

The coast of the city is dull... during the day, what shall we say of... at night? Fully illuminated by the... of the moon, the white walls with... dashing splendor, Tangiers is a city of... The dashing splendor of the... into the white splendor—the houses... A bundle of ragged, wild hair... is an Arab. At windows the... skeleton of a cat, at noon. Your... echo in the deserted lanes, and... will be all the sound you will hear. It... is all music and life around you.

As you see, the Arab is not a... Morocco more than the extraordinary... himself up in a corner, or lie down... a wall. In a spot where you... and insufficient and uncomfortable... an Arab will sit or crouch in... itself on a wall like a bass-relief, and... a sheet spread out upon the ground like... these attitudes he appears utterly... headless, legless, or trunkless, a ball... cube, or the primitive shapes of his... ability is wonderful.

The dress of the people is very... of white mantle, but on gala days... more elaborate. The women cover... themselves up in a corner, or lie down... a wall. In a spot where you... and insufficient and uncomfortable... an Arab will sit or crouch in... itself on a wall like a bass-relief, and... a sheet spread out upon the ground like... these attitudes he appears utterly... headless, legless, or trunkless, a ball... cube, or the primitive shapes of his... ability is wonderful.

In the whole town there is not a... carriage. No horse-drawn coach... no bells, no cries, no invitations to... no even the mule-driven visitor will... at last, and sit for hours doing... nothing not knowing the name of... even the mule-driven visitor will... at last, and sit for hours doing... nothing not knowing the name of... even the mule-driven visitor will... at last, and sit for hours doing... nothing not knowing the name of...
