Native swells of the shopkeeping order, with their wadded Japanese kimonos as coats, tight-fitting foreign drawers as trousers and the toy bag, about six inches long and three inches high, that the Japanese consider the very height of the fashion, they have done their best to copy from the foreign residents of their country.

Then there are the young girls, carring the properties of the state of mese wasking over the stone floor of the railway station at Yokohama. The train leaves every hour and a quarter, and when the gates are thrown open to admit passengers an official (for the railway is government property), stands in his foreign clothes and with a pair of foreign station master's pincers, as a home, snips a piece out of each one's ticket as he passes through. The train itself is a miniature affair (as indeed is everything in Japan), and is divided into first, second and third classes. The carriages of the first remind one very much of the street cars in New York, except that they are in compartments.

A number of English coal mines are being worked under the ocean. In Northumberland the net available quantity of coal under the sea is estimated at 403,000,000 tons, and on the Durham const under the sea, including a breadth of three and a half miles, with an area of seventy-one square miles, 734,500,000 tons. The latter mine is in a vein of an aggree are thickness of thirty feet, distributed in six sesms. Engineers are considering how it can be worked successfully in the future.

much of the street cars in New York, except that they are in co upartments, each section being large enough to seat eight people. The second class differs in no respect from the first, except in the absence of the divisions, and in that they are, perhaps, not quite so comfortable, though in summer, owing to their being so very much cooler, foreigners invariably prefer to ride in them. The third class carriages are such as no European would deign to be seen in: They are as near being prison cells on wheels—except that they are ineffably dirtier—as it is possible to imagine any structure that is not actually a prison. The windows are bared with iron, and seats are conspicuous by their absence. As soon as the natives get in (and they save crowded together itse a flock of sheep in a cattle train) the doors are locked, only to be reopened when the train stops at some way station. The engineers are nearly all foreigners, with assistant native firemen.
