The Power of Kindness.

Horses have a sense and a fair understanding of what fun is. I had one once that objected seriously to being caught up again after he had been turned into pasture, and he would give all the trouble he possibly could. If I took the halter and attempted to catch him he would let me come right close to him, but just as I was about to throw the strap around his neck he would lower his head, throw up his heels and dart off, looking back to see if I followed. After his repeating this maneuver half a dozen times I would turn to leave in disgust and walk rapidly away. Then compunction always seized the horse and he would come trotting up behind me, set his teeth carefully in the sleeve of my dress and jerk at it, as much as to say, "There, can't you take a joke? I was only in fun, and I'm ready to come with you now." And it takes only a short time to make a horse love you and lose all fear of you. At one time I was acquainted with a horse in Alameda whose reputation for gentleness did not equal his beauty. He was a large, handsome bay; and when I first approached his keeper, a big, burly English hostler, with the purpose of taming the horse and with a handful of sugar, he refused to let me go near him. "Couldn't allow it no ways, miss," he said; "that 'orse would bite your 'and right off if you 'eld it out to him with the sugar." I persevered, however. The "orse" didn't bite my 'and right off," but took his sugar like a lamb, and in less than two weeks from that time he would whinny and paw the ground with impatience if he heard my voice in the stable and I did not go directly to him. To be sure he once nearly squeezed me to death against the side of his stall, but it was sheer good will and affection, not viciousness, for William, who had hurried up, pale and scared, stood speechless to see that he neither struck nor bit me.—(California Magazine.)

The British Museum has purchased a vaulted wooden Egyptian coffin well preserved and a gilded mask and mummy of a lady named Tahutisa or Thothal, one of the court or family of the queen of Amasis I., of the eighteenth dynasty.

Business seems to be on the increase in this place, caused by the good bargains that are being offered at Dingle's store. People are flocking in from all parts and taking goods every day at an astonishing rate. Don't put off buying until everything is gone, but call of Cleve at once.

Bats.

One of the most wonderful cases of a large bat roost came to light in a town of New Jersey, where a house and fine lot were deserted by tenants, who were unable to stand the encroachments of these midnight marauders. As soon as the sun went down the house seemed surrounded by them, and was a window left open, the room would soon be the scene of wild confusion; the very air seemed alive with them. The place was called the "Bat-ery," and they were left in undisputed possession of the place, until within a few months, when a gentleman taking possession, determined to unearth the mystery. He soon traced the bats to an unused barn, and a thorough investigation brought to light a wonderful sight. The garret of the barn had never been used, so was boarded up, leaving only a few small holes of access, and through these the bats had passed, and for 50 years or more had lived there and multiplied. The room was one living mass of them, piled upon each other and hanging in every possible position. When the roof was broken in, they rose, thousands upon thousands, in a cloud. The floor was covered to a depth of four feet with guano, mingled with myriads of bones of those that had died. It was a confined birth and burial place for all Jersey bat-don. The owner, in relating the occurrence in a report to the Smithsonian Institution, at Washington, states that without exaggeration there must have been over 500,000 bats in the place. The old building was destroyed, and since then only the ordinary number of bats have been seen.

When you can buy a whole child's suit for $1.50, why you can afford to dress the little one nicely. At the Philadelphia Branch they sell children's suits as low as $1.50 and that is next to getting it for nothing. There can hardly be any profit on that.
