THE PRIVY COUNCILLOR'S NECK-LACE.

It is the rule of the Lord Chamberlain's office to send to the Queen's Jeweller's for valuation all the ornaments which are found in the palace after a Court ball or concert. The day after the last State ball, a gentleman came down into the office and inquired for a diamond necklace, which his wife had lost at the ball the night before. The chief clerk assured him that no diamond necklace had been found; whereupon the husband proceeded to expatiate on the enormous sum which he had given for the necklace, with a description of its various beauties. The clerk listened in silence, with much apparent sympathy, and, just as the loser was taking his leave, remarked: "It is a very odd coincidence, but your necklace was of the same pattern as a paste ornament which has been found, but which has been pronounced of so little value that it was not worth advertising." The paste necklace was produced, and it ended by the gentleman signing a receipt for it, which involved swallowing a large mouthful of humble pie after his circumstantial description of the cost of it. Could a Privy Councillor, who has held high office, condescend so far?—London World.

—Lewins never tells a lie or cheats you in selling clothing. This you can rely upon as strictly true. Never an honest man did business. This principle is what has gained the Philad. Branch more customers than all the other clothing stores together. You get no shoddy there and no auction goods.

ADVICE TO PROFESSIONAL MEN.

To professional men, men of business, and, indeed, all who are engaged in pursuits requiring more or less severe mental work, coupled with more or less confinement, exercise is, of course, the condition sine qua non of the recreation to be recommended. This is so obvious that I need not dwell upon it further than to make one remark. This is to warn all such persons that their feelings are no safe guide as to the amount of muscular exercise that is requisite for maintaining full and sustained health. By habitual neglect, or insufficient exercise, the system may, and does, accommodate itself to such neglect, so that not only may the desire for exercise cease to be a fair measure of its need, but positive exhaustion may attend a much less amount of exercise than is necessary to long continuance of sound health. However strong and well, therefore, a man may feel, notwithstanding his neglect of exercise, he ought to remember that he is playing a most dangerous game, and that sooner or later his sin will find him out, either in the form of dyspepsia, liver, kidney or other diseases, which so surely creep upon the offender against nature's laws of health. According to Dr. Parkes, the amount of exercise that a healthy man ought to take without feeling fatigue is at the least that which is required for raising 150 foot-tons per diem. This in mere walking would in the case of a man of ordinary weight be represented by a walk of between eight and nine miles, along level ground, or one mile up a tolerably steep hill, but it is desirable that the requisite amount of exercise should be obtained without throwing all the work upon one set of muscles. For this reason walking ought to be varied with rowing, riding, active games, and, where practicable, hunting or shooting, which, to those who are fond of sport, constitute the most perfect form of recreative exercise.—Nineteenth Century.

—We overheard a person asking another the other day which store in Penn's valley he considered the cheapest, and the answer immediately was, "Clevan Dinges'."

Myself by making money when a sudden chance is offered, thereby always keeping poverty from your door. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered generally become wealthy; while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. I want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. The business will pay more than ten times or twenty times. We furnish an expensive outfit, and all that you need, free. Those who engage to take money very rapidly, or only your spare moments, whole time to the work, or only your spare moments, will be paid in full, and that is needed and free.
