In order, then, to escape drowning it is only necessary to do as the brute does, and that is to tread or walk the water. The brute has no advantage in regard to his relative weight, in respect of the water, over man, and yet the man perishes while the brute lives. Nevertheless, any man, any woman, any whild who can walk on the land may also walk in the water just as readily as the animal does, if only he will, and that without auny prior instruction or drilling whatever. the other hand, treads water, remains on the surface, and is virtually insubmerpossibility—namely, the possibility of treading water, strikes me as one of the most isingular things in the history of man, and speaks very little indeed of his intelligence. He is, in fact, as ignorant on the subject as is the new-born babe. Perhaps something is to be ascribed to the vague meaning which is attached to the word swim. When a man swims it means one thing, when a dog swims it means one thing, when a dog swims it means another and quite a different act. The dog is wholly incapable of swimming as a man swims, but nothing is more certain than that a man is capable of swimming, and on the instant, too, as a dog swims, without any previous training or instruction, and that by so doing without fear or hesitancy he will be just as safe in the water as the dog is.

The cause of leanness, when there is no positive disease which produces it, is an imperfect assimilation of the food. The weight of the body undoubtedly bears a marked relation to, and increases proportionately to its height, when it is properly nourished with flesh-making blood. Hence, when we see a tall person with "slab" sides and hollow checks we have a right to infer that his blood is thin and watery and his constitution delicate. Hostertras's Stomach Bittens is peculiarly serviceable to thin, delicate people, since it strengthens the digestive and assimilative organs, and is consequently a powerful auxiliary in the blood manufacturing processes, which in a state of health ought to be, and are, thoroughly performed. An increase of muscle, as well as fat, is a result of using this sovereign anti-dyspeptic, appetizing and generally corrective cordial.
