There can be no doubt of Guiteau's political orthodoxy. Here is an extract from one of his campaign speeches last year:

"This is the Issue—a solid North against a solid South. The North conquered the South on the field of battle, and now they must do it at the polls in November, or they may have to fight another war. Ye men whose sons perished in the war, what say you to the issue, shall we have another war? Shall our National Treasury be controlled by ex-rebels and their Northern allies, to the end that millions of dollars of Southern war claims be liquidated? If you want prospect of another war, make Hancock President. If you want prosperity and peace, make Garfield President, and the Republic will develop till it becomes the grandest and wealthiest nation on the globe."
