When the moment for the selemnities was announced, the windows and doors were closed and all sounds were hushed. Owing to the necessity of starting the train promptly on time, Colonel Rockwell had requested the officiating clergyman to occupy but five minutes. The clergyman read a passage from the Scriptures and made a short address, after which the body was conveyed to the train.

The guard of honor to accompany the President's remains to Washington was as follows: First Lieutenant Thomas C. Patterson, First Sergeant Perrin, Corporal Jorbert, Privates Allen, Owen, Towder, Rodeick, Bennett, Golden and Heinrich. The guard rode in the same car with the late President's remains, and a sentinel with fixed bayonet stood at the head and foot of the coffin.

Many thousands have come from Baltimore and the neighboring towns and country, and many thousands more, mostly colored, have passed through twice or oftener. Nobody has been allowed to remain in the rotunds except the guard from the Army of the Cumberland and several members of Columbia Commandery. There were many offerings of flowers. Marshal Niel roses with green leaves and stems attached were strewn upon the redge of the platform, while beyond the bier and extending to the west door was a line of exquisite designs. First was a wreath of ivy, lying flat upon the stone floor. Beyond this was a broken column of white buds, surmounted by a white dove whose head was bent toward the bier. The flates Ajar 'sent by the members of the late President's church in this city. The posts were of white roses and rested in beds of yellow and white flowers. The two wings were of ferns, with white flowers here and there. Next was a crown made of white flowers, principally of buds and roses, and having around its crests the same delicate fern of all the other floral offerings. The crown was surmounted by immortelles. Beyond it was a pillow of flowers from which sprung a column with a dove on its top with head looking up and ready for flight. The bed of white flowers which formed the pillow below had worked upon it in immortelles the words "Our Martyr President." The row of flowers ended as it began, with a simple wreath of ivy.

Queen Victoria cabled this morning to the British minister to have a floral tribute prepared and presented in her name. During the morning it was placed at the bier of the President. It is very large and beautiful, composed of shife roses, smilax and stephanotis. It is accompanied by a non-tring card bearing the following in-scription:

QUEEN VICTORIA,
To the memory of the late President
Garfield.
An expression of her sorrow and sympathy with Mrs. Garfield and the American nation, Sept. 22, 1881.

At night the rotunda was again lighted. At half past 6 the lid of the casket was closed by order of Secretary Blaine. Still the ceaseless tide of people rolled on.

impressive. The great edifice crowned with crape rose in clear lines of black and white above a mourning multitude bathed in the sunlight of a clear September day. The spacious park on the eastern side of the capitol was filled with a moving mass of humanity intent upon catching if possible a glimpse of the simple coffin of the dead Presidentas it was carried down the broad staircase by his brethren of the Christian church. The staircase, too, was thronged just as it was on the fourth of March, which seems so many years back in the past. Within and without were masses of men and women and little children. It was calculated that 50,000 people stood inside the park, and inside the rotunda was a dense, pushing crowd. At 3 o'clock Rev. Isaac Errist, of Cucinnati, editor of the Christian Standard, the official organ of the Christian church, opened the services by prayer. He was an old and intimate friend of the dead President, Following the prayer was the rendition by the Philtarmonic society of the District of Columbia of the anthem from Mondelsohn's oratorio of Sc. Paul, "To Thee, Oh Lord, I yield my spirit." Then a short sermon was delivered by the Rev. Frederick D. Power, pastor of the Christian church in this city, where President Garfield was a regular attendant during his public life in Washington for the past eighteen years. At its end the choir sang, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul". The benediction was pronounced, and the ceremonics anded, the choir singing "Asleepin Jesus" as the cortego passed out of the rotunda.

At the conclusion of the brief and simple service at the capitol over the remains of the lamented President, the procession which had been formed in line for some time previous, began to move. It was shortly after 3 o'clock, Down the steps of the capitol and along Pennsylvania avenue slowly moved the impressive line until the depot of the Baltimore and Potomac railroad was reached.

The following was the order of the procession from the capitol to the railroad depot:

At nearly every place on the route bells were heard tolling as the train passed, and at one or two places dirgos were played by brass banis. After daylight it was noticed by the passengers that the women in the crowds through which the train passed were weeping.

The Rev. Dr. Charles S. W. Pomeroy delivered the closing prayer. Immediately afterward the red-coated marine band, which stood without the pavilion, played with sweet and touching effect, "Nearer, my God, to Thee."

The band then played "There's a beautiful land over there," and "Safe in the arms of Jesus."

Why sit ye idle, dumb?

Thrust in your sharpened sickle,
And gather in the grain.
The night is fast approaching,
And roon will come again.
The Master called for reapers,
And shall He call in vain;
Shall sheaves lie there ungathered,
And waste upon the plain?

Mount up the height's of wisdom,
And crush each error low;
Reep back no words of knowledge
That human hearts should know.

No better remedy in the whole materia medica has yet been compounded for the relief and cure of Female Compilaints, of the ordinary kind, than Yeoftine. It seems to act in these cases with unworted certainty, and never fails to give a new and healthful tone to the female organs, to remove relaxed debility and unhealthy secretions, and restore a healthful vigor and elasticity. One of the most common of these compilaints is Leucorrhose or Whites, which are brought on either by the presence of Scrofula in the system, or by some affection of the womb, or even by general debility. For all these complaints, and when danger begins to threaten woman at the turn of life, Yeaghtrac and be commended without qualification. The great prevalence of these disorders, and their cure by Yeaghtre, has amply shown that the sure alleviating agent remains not yet to be discovered, but is already known, and is a tavorite with American ladies. Too long has it been the custom to prescribe nauseating and uncertain remedies in place of what is pleasant, efficacious and cheap. Try Yeashtne, and do not doubt its power to carry you safely through danger and disease.
