and gaudy as a flag, he fought with leaps and cries beneath a storm of canister shot. At one moment the curtain of smoke which rose from the street parted a little between two cannonades and allowed him to see the red pantalons massed in the Champs Elysees. Then everything was confused again. He thought he had been mistaken, and made his powder talk in its loudest tores.

Suddenly the barricade grew silent. The last artillerist had just fled, after firing his final shot. The Turco didnot retir. In ambush, ready to leap, he

There was a little of everything in those staffs of the commune, red coats, Polish cloaks, Hungarian jackets, marines' Blouses, gold, velvet, spangles and lace. With his blue vest, embroidered with yellow, his turban and his derbonka, the Turce completed the masquerade. Filled with joy at finding himself in such fine company, intoxicated by the smallight, the cannonade.

ment. $50, and the gated $156." The four sides of the base contain: First, an inscription dedicating the monument as a memorial of the victory; secend, an inscription presenting a succinct narrative of the siege prepared in accordance with the original archives in the department of state; third, the treaty of alliance with the king of France; and fourth, the treaty of peace with the king of france; and fourth, the treaty of peace with the king of England. In the pediments over these four sides respectively are presented, carved in relief: First, emblems of nationality; second, emblems of war; third, emblems of seace. The base is thus devoted to the historical statement; it explains the subsequent incidents of the monumental composition, which are intended solely to appeal to the imagination. The immediate result of the historical events written upon the base was the happy establishment of a national union of thirteen youthful, free and independent States. To celebrate this joy ful union the sculptor has represented upon the world; and people are fast finding this joy ful union the sculptor has represented upon the world; and people are fast finding this joy ful union the sculptor has represented upon the world; and people are fast finding this joy ful union the sculptor has represented upon the seed by its use. Where the Horses Went.

Farmers in the neighborhood of De Witt and Brunswick, Mo., recently have missed great numbers of horses. It was known, of course, that the animals were being stolen; but where the thieves took them the victims had no idea. Roads were guarded all night, horses continued to disappear. A few days ago a hunter penetrated the depth of a forest of willows that grow at the mouth of the Grand river. The forest covers an island of some 5,000 acres, and so thickly interwoven are the limbs of the trees that it is extremely difficult to enter. The sportsman heard the neigh of a horse far in among the willows. It occurred to him that the neigh had some connection with the mystery of the missing animals. A half-hours hard work brought him to the heart of the forest, and there he saw forty or of the missing animals. A half-hour's hard work brought him to the heart of the forest, and there he saw forty or more horses quietly feeding in a barbed wire inclosure. The thieves had a secret path to the pound. They had been removing the horses at pleasure during night by means of a Mississippi flat boat. On the evening of the discovery they were nabbed.

Abandoned. Abandoned.

We perceive by one of our Massachusetts exchanges that Dr. Lorenzo Waite, of Westfield, an eminent physician of Berkshire county, strongly indorses St. Jacobs Oil. With it he cured a case of Jacobs Oil. Sciatica that resisted all regular pro-fessional treatment, and that had in fact been abandoned as incurable.

William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., says. In the fall of 1876 I was taken with bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and fiesh, and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half-dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I rawe up hope, but a friend told me of Ds. William Hall's Balsam fron the Lungs. I got a bottle, when, to my surprise, I commenced to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past. I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased lungs will take Ds. William Hall's Balsam, and be convinced that consumption can me curen. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

A GRAND STEEPLE CHASE

As if there were not sufficient excitement at the usual horse-race, these meetings on the turf nearly always close with a grand steeple chase. This kind of race combines all the excitement of the regular race, with the super-added element of danger which received the super-added el the super-added element of danger which seems to give further zest to the sport. Horses, and good ones at that, often receive severe injuries, which render them practically useless for long periods.
