"You can have this room all to yourself, sir," said Mr. Hunter, triumphantly.

"You really must not let me disturb you," replied the traveler.

"Don't you mention it," replied the landlord, in a tone which was at once genial and confidential; "we would not turn a customer away from our dcors. You see, we do not have much parlor company."

"And this is the only room you have that is disengaged?"

He drew then from the leaves of the diary a letter written in a delicate feminine hand and addressed, "Arthur Seton, Esq., 12 Gray's Inn." This letter he regarded with a long, sad, loving look; then, resting his head on his hand, he read it through very slowly. It ran as follows:

"My Dear Arthur: If you will be so suspicious, so jealous and exacting, I cannot see how we are ever to be happy. Faith without works is dead, and love without faith is no blessing, but a weary burden. I am tired of cross words and looks. Some women, I was frank to the past. This meeting was not of your seeking, and it seems to me unmanly to take advantage of this opportunity."

"We are sometimes so mistaken," she said, hurriedly, but her words were hardly audible, and he continued:
