DISCIPLINE FOR ST. LOUIS WIVES.

In the complaint accompanying the suit for divorce which a St. Louis lady had begun appears a transcript of rules to have been written out by the husband for the guidance of his wife while absent from him. The lady was to speak to no one on a railway train nor allow herself to be spoken to, except by the conductor and porter in the discharge of their duty; she was not to sing or even sit in a parlor of the house to which she was going, nor sing in her own room when any one not a member of her own immediate family was present. She was not to leave her mother, night or day, for five minutes at a time, nor go to walk or ride, even with her own brother, unless her mother was also present. She was to make no calls nor receive any except from her brothers and their wives, nor speak to any one whom she had known in the past, nor to permit any one to be introduced to her; in case of an introduction she was not to speak. She was to write her husband every night a full account of what she had done, where she had been and with whom, and to whom she had spoken during the day. The lady alleges that in order to visit her mother she is obliged to swear to obey these rules.

Principal Dawson still adheres to the doctrine that the drift phenomena were produced by icebergs floating in the ocean, rather than by glaciers. The last Canadian Naturalist gives his present views on the subject in the form of remarks upon Von Woeckhoff's "Memoir on Glaciers and Icebergs in Relation to Climate." He assumes that the glacialists adhere to the doctrine of the continental glacier, and argues that no amount of cold induced sufficient evaporation and precipitation to afford the necessary snow in the interior. He is fighting a man of straw, for glacialists now believe the great snowfall to have been along the Labrador peninsula, from which the ice moved in all directions, but notably to the southwest, till met in the Mississippi Valley the ice flowing south-esterly from the British Columbia highlands. If the ice stretched from sea to sea, it was because the Labrador and Columbia glaciers became confluent in the great continental valley, not because of any excessive snowfall in the interior. Dawson thinks the great "terminal moraine" (he forgot that there are several of them) must have been the "southern margin of an ice-laden sea, where the floe of ice and bergs grounded or where the ice suddenly melted." The first reason cannot hold, because these moraine lines vary more than 1,000 feet in altitude and a sea-shore line should be approximately horizontal; the second makes it necessary to believe in a submergence of the continent for more than 6,000 feet. This view is self-contradictory; for, if all the land in the northern part of the continent were submerged, there would be no opportunity for icebergs to form and no projecting peaks to supply the fragments of rock transported.
