

"Don't you think," said a reporter to an ex-Congressman, "that Congress could have remedied the tariff abuse without a commission?" "No. There are not twenty Congressmen who understand the tariff question." Then it might seem that there are not more than twenty Congressmen fit to occupy their seats. Still, there were considerably more than that number who printed speeches on this question, while the rest of them looked as wise as owls and said nothing.—Chicago Times (Ind.) May 26.
