has anything to say against that arrangement will have to go out of my house to say it—not that I marraid of any such result in this case—and, on the whole, Aunt Anne, I should like to try the experiment."

Mother smiled grimly, but Tom was so evidently bent on his "experiment," as he called it, that she gave up the argument.

"You can dance if you are ready to pay the piper," she said, shortly. "And, ray, how soon do you mean to be married?"

Tom's face fell a little at this question.

"Well," said he, "I cau't say exact."

"What!" said mother, opening her of air." "What!" said mother, opening her eyes; "why, you never mean to say, Tom, you haven't spoken to her yet?" answered Tom, cheerfully. "Not yet," answered Tom, cheerfully. "Time enough for that, you know, after I had spoken to you." "Well." she said, "if it was anybody else I should say he was eracked; but you were never like other people, and never will be, Tom Dean. But, at least, you have fixed on the lady?" "A least, you have fixed on the lady?" "What is it, May?"

"Have you?" said Tom; "that's odd, for I—well, never mind that just yet. What is it, May?"

"Have you?" said Tom; "Have sout." Have you?" said Tom; "Have sout." Have you?" said Tom; "Have sout." Have you?" said Tom; "Have you." Have you?" said Tom; "Have you." Have you." Have you?" said Tom; "Have you." Have you." Have you." Have you." Have you. Have you. "I was it. May?"

"Tom." I said, still surer now he had misjudged me, and more resolved to set him right, "I want a place."

"A place?" repeated Tom, puzzled, as well he might be by this sudden and indefluite announcement; "what hat and left the room.

Our household was rather queerly protogether. There is no particular reason why I should have been of it at all, for I was not really related to Tom, nor even to "mother," as I called her, though I am sure we were as dear to each other as any mother and daughter could be.
