The loss by the water spout on Thursday was much greater than was at first supposed. From a point three miles north of Corning down to South Bend and up the west branch of the Ohio Central to Buckingham, a distance of sixteen or eighteen miles, the track is almost entirely destroyed. For miles it cannot be observed that a railroad was built there. Most all of the live atock in two valleys was swept away. It is believed that the loss to railroads, mines and individuals will approximate to $500,000.
