—The Plymouth church pew sales, the other day, amounted to $24,209. Mr. Claffin got the first choice for $725—this is more than the average salary of ministers in Centre county.

—Mr. Jacob Sankey and son, of Millheim, have purchased a new 40 horse-power engine, which they intend for their portable sawmill on their timber tract a few miles this side of Millheim.

—Bellefonte has organized a board of trade, with General Beyer as president; J. D. Shantz, treasurer; Howard Lincise secretary. A full vote was given for Beyer, and to know of us what this General wanted to "trade" in now—produce, live-stock, or any and all things.

—Dingess still has overcoats left of the special lot lately purchased. He has marked down prices on these to close them out and make room for others. It will pay to go to the Pennsylvania bargain store and purchase one of these over-coats and lay it by for next winter, if it is not needed now.

—We see from the Journal that the bellows in the new Lutheran church at Millheim, 745 pounds in weight, costing $225, was donated by H. E. Duck, esq., and J. H. Frank. Handsome is who hand-comes does.

—The Philadelphia Journal has changed to a quarto form, same as Reporter, and comes to us greatly improved. Success to you.

—Mr. Sam'l Krider advertises his valuable property, at Potter's Mills, for sale, in Reporter.

—We are very sorry to learn of the very serious illness of our old friend, T. G. E. Hart, of near Aaronsburg. He is suffering from pneumonia.

CHEAP SLEIGH—J. C. Condo, at Penn Hall, has a number of handsomely finished sleighs, finely cushioned, well ironed, and guaranteed in every respect, which he now offers at near cost. If you want a real bargain in sleighs, call at the shops of Mr. Condo. 11Jan5t —The new Evangelical church, in Georges' Valley, on the road leading to Potter's Mills, will be dedicated to the service of the Triune God, Sunday, 21st instant. Rev. M. J. Carothers, of Milton, will officiate. Rev. P. C. WEDMEYER.

—Brown's new grocery near the corner of Bishop and Allegheny streets, is the place where farmers can always get the highest prices for produce, and get anything in the line of family groceries fresh, pure and cheap. Give the new grocery a trial.

—Alexander & Co., Bellefonte, pay for Cloverseed, fair $6.50, good 7.00, prime 7.75, and choice $8.00.

—A valuable business stand, at Spring Mills—coal and grain—is advertised for sale by J. D. Long, in another col. of Reporter.

—The musical festival to be held in this place, commencing Feb. 5, will undoubtedly be the finest affair of the kind yet held in this county.

—Ladies, bear in mind that Dingess is always in constant receipt of new and late style dress goods. He has resolved that the ladies of this section shall have the opportunity of keeping up with the times—and they will give him credit for his exertions.

—The Bellefonte Republican demands that nothing on the sidewalks of that town be stopped. There is another nuisance which the police in that town should put a stop to and which is a source of complaint with many people from the country, namely, the practice the boys have of clinging by the dozen to every passing sleigh; we know of no other town where this annoyance is practiced to the same extent as in Bellefonte.

—We call the attention of any of our readers who are in want of a salaried situation, and who can fill the bill, to the advertisement in another column of R. G. Chase & Co., headed "Wanted." Write to them for particulars. 4Jan5t —For low prices in job work, sale bills etc., call at the Reporter office, or send your orders by mail. Try us.

J. N. LEITZER, Auctioneer, Spring Mills—satisfaction guaranteed, and charges moderate. 11Jan5t

—Men and boys' suits always on hand, at all prices, and low as the lowest elsewhere, at Dingess' Pennsylvania Bargain store.

—Smallpox is said to have been carried from Baltimore to several ports along the shores of Chesapeake Bay.

—Mr. E. E. Spangler writes us from Illinois, January 4, 1888: Mr. T. Beldon, of Kaneville, Ill., sold 58 head of hogs which averaged 488 pounds. He realized from them $6,30 per cwt. Mr. Ben. Gramley, a near neighbor of Mr. Beldon, has in the neighborhood of 100 head of hogs to sell, but does not expect them to average with the above. Mrs. Henry Seavey sold 130 head of chickens which brought her the round sum of $87, and it was not a good year for chickens either.

—The latest faith cure is from Huntingdon county. John N. Neff, who resides near Petersburg, Huntingdon Co., who has not been able to walk for over seven years, is the subject of a remarkable faith cure. Mr. Neff prayed to be restored to health and strength at 8 o'clock on Thursday evening, 2d instant, and at precisely that hour he quickly arose, and in the presence of about forty persons, walked around the room.

—We see from a note from the Commissioners' clerk, Mr. Walker, that the Co. Auditors are at work and will soon be ready with their report. We trust the Auditors will give the accounts the same careful scrutiny of last year. The tax-payers want no more lightly going over in this important matter. As the Auditors did their work so thoroughly last year, let them not lack in the same service now, and so let it be in the future.

—The greatest place to save money is at the Philad. Branch, in ready-made clothing. Overcoats, men and boys' suits, have been marked down, since New Year, in order to enable the poorest to be decently clad for 1888. Lewins is a philanthropist and has done a great deal already for the people of this county. In keeping down the prices of clothing, thousands of dollars have been saved to the people, and he made something too by having many customers. The Philad. Branch deserves the most liberal encouragement from all.

—Still some first class goods on hand at Brockerhoff's store and offered at cost. Ladies dress goods, notions, ready-made clothing, glass and queensware, boots, shoes, hats, soap, fancy articles, all offered at cost to close out stock. Produce of all kinds taken and highest prices allowed for same.

CENTRE COUNTY MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

A grand county musical convention will be held in the M. E. church, at Centre Hall, commencing Monday evening, February 5th, closing Friday evening. The musical exercises will be under the direction of Prof. W. O. Perkins, Mus. Doc., of Boston. Dr. Perkins, an eminent and talented author and teacher, is well known to all singers. He has the experience of more than thirty-five years as a convention director and principal of Normal Musical schools, and has enjoyed a course of study and observation in the best schools of Europe. His lectures on various topics, such as Vocalization, Management of the Breath, Articulation, Phrasing, Proper Reading of Church Music, etc., will interest all who attend. The well-known and excellent pianist, Prof. W. T. Meyer, will preside at the piano. Talented vocalists and instrumentalists from all parts of the state will be present. Prof. P. H. Meyer, J. A. Weaver, and other prominent musicians are expected. Grand concerts will be given on Thursday and Friday evenings, February 8 and 9.

Three sessions will be held daily at 9:30 a. m.—1:30 and 7 p. m. Those applying to Sec'y of Ex. Com. before January 27, will be supplied with boarding free. Rates at hotel, $2.50 to $3.00 for the term.

A collection of choruses and the "Choral Choir" will be used. A cordial invitation is extended to all musical organizations and all interested in vocal music, to be present and participate.

Class tickets, $1.00; reserved tickets for spectators, 75 cents. Season tickets, 25 cents extra. Concert, 25 cents. For further particulars apply to J. B. Solt, J. W. Wolf, C. Dingess, Wm. Loeb, H. Boozer, C. Herlischer, J. T. Lee, A. Thomas, Jas. Lohr, S. Harper, Executive Committee.

PENN HALL ITEMS.

The religious services at the Salem Ref. church are closed with a good result, 17 persons having been received by confirmation and 1 by certificate.

The erection of the new public school building, in Gregg township, has awakened the people to a new energy. Many of the young folks in the vicinity have made up their minds to take advantage of the opportunity to secure a liberal education at home. Prof. C. M. Smith has charge of the grammar school and is an excellent teacher.

Prof. W. P. Hosterman, principal of the Centre Hall schools, was here on a visit a few days to his home. Always glad to see you William, here is my message.

James Bitner has returned from the west, and his brother Daniel from Schuylkill county. They have been absent since early spring.

The Court appointed J. B. Fisher, F. D. Hosterman and H. B. Herring road viewers on roads near Wolf's store. They have completed their work after two days' active service.

W. H. Bloom sold part of his timber to be manufactured into lumber. Prof. Wolf's phaeton and Billy Bitner's huckster wagon are both up for repairs—horses running off did it.

J. B. Heckman is feeding a beef which weighs over 2000 pounds—Jumbo. W. B. Fidler was unfortunate while out on hunting on the Brush mountain. He fell on a rock and cut his knee severely.

Constable Kline fully equipped himself to arrest a fellow in Georges' valley, who was charged with removing grain from a barn without the consent of the owner. He was captured and appeared before Justice Herring, but was discharged for want of proof.

Have received no pass for "on to Harrisburg" so will remain at home. Pattison will not need our services.

More scared than hurt, Cal. Moyer on Sunday evening on his way home from Georges' valley church, when his sleigh stopped. Be careful when you have such a precious jewel in charge. News Boy.

—More snow on Wednesday. There is pretty good sleighing now all around.

Pattison is ignorant. There was a large crowd at the inauguration and a large civil parade—but not a cent of expenses to the state.

Charles K. Seltzer, Wrightsville, Pa., says: Brown's Iron Bitters have done more for me than I ever thought medicine could.

JACOB FULTZ.

A REMINISCENCE OF THE LATE WAR

How He Dodged the Draft, and Eluded the Officers Sent to Arrest Him.

During the late civil war the subject of this article became quite famous on account of his successful escape from the draft, although deputy marshals with their squads were repeatedly sent into our valley to arrest him. He had determined not to obey the draft, neither would he leave his own locality, Penn township, to make his escape.

Jacob Fultz was a man of courage, with robust frame, and inured to hardships, yet a man of good name among his neighbors. He did not believe the war was right, and had made a firm resolve not to take part in it even if drafted—acting from conscientious motives. And he successfully carried out his resolve—for the draft hit him, but he did not go.

After being notified of the prize he drew in Uncle Sam's lottery, Mr. Fultz began to keep himself "scarce," never, however, at any time leaving his own neighborhood. Not making his appearance when wanted, deputies, "hirelings" as he calls them, soon went to see what might be wrong with Jacob's health; but when Butts, Lose, and others, got to Penn township, Jacob, like the Irishman's flea, was not there. He often could see them, but the deputies could not see Fultz, so vigilant and cunning was he.

In his plans To keep out of their hands.

The hunt after Fultz went over a period of some two years, and while the officers went out in their neighborhood more than six miles, yet the deputies and their posse searched for him in vain, and returned baffled and under the grin of Fultz's friends. In fact it was a game of Fultz against Uncle Sam, including deputies Butts, Lose and their file of soldiers, in which Jacob played the best hand all the time.

His legs would save him now—his security being place then. The deputies would not get right on a fresh trail of the red-headed object of their search and sniff the air in triumph, but would have to return to Bellefonte without having bagged the wily fox.

Mr. Fultz, of course, found his situation very annoying, because he did not know when the officers would pounce down upon him like a thief in the night, and he had to suffer many privations and discomforts, especially during the hard winter when the search for him was most earnest and frequent. But he had resolved to submit to all these, and die rather than enter the army.

Fultz gives his account thus: "As I was taking dinner at Charles Wingard's, in name Hews and Leitler, and asked my name and age, which I told them was my own business. This led to a quarrel and they said they would arrest me if I did not give my name. I left the table and started for my shop, for my shooting iron; when I returned they had started for their buggy at a double quick. I told them to come back and I would print my name on their foreheads with lead, but they drove away.

"Not long after this they arrested Mr. Wingard, altho' he was not to blame for anything in my case. They thought they would catch me then too. But I attended to that.

"I was drafted in the first draft and was notified to appear—but did not. Next Butts and Lose were after me, thinking they would take me right along—but that didn't happen. They came to George Long's one night, about midnight, and inquired of the road to Mr. Hosterman's. He pointed out the road. They then asked to be let into the house, but I told them they could not enter the house. When they came to the garret stairs and opened the door, they found a trap door which was not easy to open as the other. Lose called to Butts, who was outside standing guard, 'Come up here Mr. Butts, here is the red—' 'We will have him now.' Butts ran up stairs, and then the two tried to burst the trap-door, but failed, and were all the while leaving plans how they would take me to Williamsport. Then they went for an axe and cut a hole through the door, but when they got through the red-head had disappeared. I slid down outside on a bed-board, a distance of some 30 feet and made my escape through the snow without hat, coat or shoes—leaving them to mourn over their sad disappointment.

The next morning I came back, and was sitting in the room looking up the lane, and beheld the whiskey chariot coming down the lane. But I escaped through the back door. That day they arrested Sam'l Wolf, a poor cripple, and dragged him to Williamsport. But he was sent home again.

"In April I went to the Seven Mountains about eight miles southeast of Millheim, and took a job of cutting logs and got two conscripts to help me. We worked all summer, made money and lived better than if we had been in the army or boarded at the White-house. We lived mostly on fish, bread and potatoes. If the back-bones of the trout and eels we ate had been tied together, they would reach from here to Richmond. In the fall we quit work and went home, and did nothing that winter. In the spring shortly before the war ended, they sent a number of mounted cavalry to take up, they had some of the Bellefonte—(Mr. Kurtz, give them a name) along with them as guides. They came to Mr. Long's on Friday evening, and formed a line of battle in front of the house, and then orders were given to chase him out. But I did not happen to be in—but was not far off. I then gave all the other boys notice, and we struck for the old shanty in the mountains. Did not get there that night, however, but occupied the shanty next day, remaining about 3 o'clock in the afternoon when we started out into the valley, and lodged in Auman's barn that night. Same night they went in to the shanty expecting to find us there—but they ran up on their calculations. On this trip they went in as far as Fowlers, on horseback, leaving their horses at Mr. Fowler's, they pressed Abraham Ulrich into the service of piloting them to the shanty. But he led them in a roundabout direction, obliging them to wade the icy waters of Penns Creek and across the most rocky mountains to the shanty, where they lodged that night. They took their breakfast on a few potatoes and patent buggy grease, which we had left in the shanty, and then left for Millheim after demolishing every thing in the shanty, declaring the deserters might go to h—."

We saw this cavalry squad, some fifteen, after their return from the above expedition. They looked as though they had a hard time of it, which undoubtedly was the case.

The war ended, and the government quit its hunt after the fellows who dodged the draft, and "red-headed" Fultz has since not been molested, altho' he rather got ahead of his good old Uncle Samuel. Fultz has been staying in the lower end of the valley since, making an honest living by hard, honest labor.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT

Two Boilers Explode and Cause DEATH AND DESTRUCTION

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 9.—Shortly after two o'clock this afternoon a frightful boiler explosion occurred at No. 1 blast furnace of the Bethlehem Iron Company, resulting in the death of four men and a woman and in the serious injury of several others. Ten boilers were located over the engine house at an elevation of thirty-five feet. Five of these were forty inches in diameter and thirty-six feet in length, and the others were smaller and were used for heating purpose. Two of the largest boilers exploded with terrific force, wrecking the exterior of the engine house and demolishing nearly half of the pattern shop adjoining the engine house. One of the boilers was carried through the ventilator and broke through the roof of the old mill and fell to the ground. Of the ten boilers only three were left in position. The scene that followed was one of alarm and consternation. The workmen rushed to and fro in their excitement and it was at first believed that the loss of life was greater. The interior of the engine house was filled with debris, and men were at once put to work to search for the missing Samuel McCandlers, one of the boiler tenders, and was scolded to death. Another man was taken from the ruins, who was not recognized. The wife of a puddler named Grot, who had brought his dinner, was passing through the engine house when the boiler was carried through the ventilator and she was killed, the body being picked out of the debris. The boiler, thrown through the roof of the mill was thrown a distance of three hundred feet and fell amongst about a hundred workmen.

In the House of the Pennsylvania Legislature a bill was introduced to confiscate the lines of all telegraph companies which had consolidated with each other.
