Ladies' Missionary society, was so far as we have learned, a novel affair in Midner Hereafter all subscribers paying dletown, and was immensely enjoyed by all present. The understanding with those that partook of the supper was, that if they spoke a word during the meal however trival, they would be required to pay the price of the supper, while those who maintained a strict silence were to be subjected to no charge. A number refrained from speaking, and at the same time managed by motions and cabalistic signs to secure sufficient food for a full meal. With others the habit is so fixed that they must talk under all circumstances, and so they broke the rule in spite of their efforts to keep si lence, and cheerfully expressed their willingness to abide by the penalty. Af-ter supper it was agreed by all who par-took that the merriment and fun derived from the occasion was well worth the money, and all gladly paid the price of the supper, thereby helping to raise a nice sum of money for a very worthy cause.
