-------GROWTH OF PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW YORK.

Mr. Fernon, of Philadelphia, in a re season of phenomenal growth. Above are the appointments for the Harlem river it is scarcely better off than ALTOONA DISTRICT. the New England States in respect to its prospects for increase of population. Pennsylvania, on the contrary, has a great future before it. In evidence of this Mr. Fernon points to the many new railroads in progress of construction and the much larger number of rai road projecten. In coal lands, too, particularly in the bituminious coal regions, there have been large investments within a twelvemonth. There is pleaty of room for in crease of population in Pennsylvania. With the single exception of Allegheny, not a county, west of the Susquehanna contains 100,000 inhabitants. Indeed, but six of the fifty countres of the State can boast of that much population, while in Hollidaysburg-J. E Bell. the great majority of the counties the Howard-John Stine. the great majority of the cousties the population is yet very sparse. Pennsyl-vania is not only a large producer of coal, and iron and oil, but of coro, wheat, tobacco and lumber. From the facts and figures which he finds at hand, Mr. Fer-non predicts that Pennsylvania, in the early part of the coming century, will pass by New York and take the head of the column as the most populous State

At a recent social gathering in Boston the conversation was upon literature, and somebody chanced to mention ture, and someoody chanced to mention the saying about a prophet's lack of hon-or in his own country. "Yes," remarked Mr. J. T. Trowbridge. "I know all about that. The Tax Collector called upon me last Spring, and in the course of conversation asked me what I did for a living. I said I wrote, and after having to explain to him that I was neither a bookkeeper nor a copyist, I told him I wrote books. 'Pshaw, now, said he 'I want to know! Wa-al, it's kind o' curious I never heard o' that. Got any of 'em about yer?' I said I had some of them in the house, but I didn't keep a very large supply on hand. 'Well, you can git 'em, I s'pose?' was the next remark. I said I could, and he gave me an order on the spot. 'Send me down the handsomest copy you've got,' said he, 'and I'll pay you for it. If we've got a man that kin write, 'I'll do my duty by him.""
