Here At Last, After Long and Weary Waiting Relief is Brought to Those Who Need It.

"Well, Pat," said an Orange county physician to a complicated Irish patient some years ago, "for that pain in your chest you had better go home and put on a mustard plaster. I can't think the minute of anything better. And by the way," added the doctor turning to a friend, "I wish somebody would invent a real good plaster—something actually helpful for such cases as Pat's. Maybe they will sometime when it's too late for me to use it."

When BENSON'S CAPSICINE POROUS PLASTER was placed on market about ten years ago the doctor's hope became a fact. Because of the rare medicinal virtues inherent in it, its rapid action and sure results, the Capsicine is fast displacing the slow-acting plaster of former days, for all affections to which a plaster is ever applicable. Price 25 cents. In the middle of the genuine is cut the word "Capsicine".

INDIANS SURRENDER TO CROOK.

Tombstone, Arizona, June 11.—An arrival this morning from Chiricahua brings information that General Crook has returned from his expedition and is encamped on Silver Creek at the south end of the Chiricahua.

Sixty miles southeast of this place Saco Chatto, with 230 hostiles, surrendered and were brought in by general Crook, who recrossed the line last Saturday. Among the prisoners were 73 bucks. It is believed that Crook will return and endeavor to capture the warriors. His command is in good fighting order. There have been no casualties so far.

An Ostrich's Nest.

After pairing, the ostrich begins to make his nest. It is the male alone that performs this duty. To do this it squats upon the ground and, balancing itself upon its sternum, it scratches up the earth with its legs and throws the sand behind it. When it has dug out enough on one side to suit it, it turns around and begins to dig on another side, and continues this operation until it has made a hole large enough for it to sit in comfortably. This nest is elliptical in shape, and is about 0.25 meters deep, 1 meter wide, and 14 meters long. A few days after the nest is finished the female begins to lay one egg on every alternate day for eighteen or twenty days. She then rests for a while, which time varies from four to ten days, and then begins to lay more. A pair of ostriches yield forty eggs. This is only the minimum number, which is always reached. It is not unusual for a well-fed, well-kept pair to yield fifty and even sixty eggs. The eggs are placed so as to leave no space between them. They are sat upon at first for several hours each day, and finally altogether. The male and the female brood alternately. At night the male is always on the nest, and it possesses greater warmth than the female. When the birds relieve each other on the nest the new-comer turns over each egg in order that the portion which has lain against the nest shall receive the warmth of the brooder. These birds perform their duties with the greatest skill, without any noise or breakage of the eggs. They squat down and with their head and neck rake up and overturn every one of the eggs one after the other, without neglecting a single one. The incubation lasts forty-five days on an average, sometimes fifty days but never continues beyond that. When the chicklings hatch out they can be heard trying to break the shell of the egg. Sometimes they succeed in doing so, but usually the father breaks the egg under his breast bone, and seizing with his bill the inside skin tears it and frees the chickling. Upon first reaching the air the chickling remains limp and weak. But the warmth of the parents soon revives it, and a few hours afterward it begins to run about the nest, exercising its long legs, tottling over at each step, and recommencing again its stumbling journey. Four days after their hatching the chicklings begin to eat. They run after insects and swallow small pebbles.

White Roses.

The decrees of fashion in flowers are almost as inexorable as those respecting dress—particularly in the manner of wearing them. A young man who should now appear in wide trousers, instead of those which cling to the leg, would be subject to ridicule; so would he be frowned on if he wore a red rose when it was the proper thing to wear a white one. Just now men wear large white rosebuds in their buttonholes on evening occasions. This fashion lacks originality. The men are wearing large white rosebuds in London. Last season the man of fashion here got the smallest white flower he could find. The flower most in use at present is the rose, either of a delicate pink shade or white. When a bride does not wear the traditional orange blossoms she adorns herself with white roses and half-open buds. The bridesmaids carry colored roses, mostly of a pink tint. The groom wears a white rosebud when the bride carries white roses, and the groomsmen have flowers in their coats corresponding to the bouquets carried by the ladies they escort.

Corsage bouquets for evening parties or street wear consist simply of pink or white roses tied in a loose bunch. If more than one kind of buds are used those of the same color are grouped together. All flowers must have their own stems, which should be long. At dinners, instead of flowers are placed in front of each guest. At luncheon parties there is usually a bunch of roses for each guest, which is fastened to the corsage after luncheon is over and worn on the street.

Cleveland, June 11.—An elderly lady named Mrs. Stratton, living alone on Brooklyn street, came to her death last evening in a very strange manner. A heavy storm prevailed during the afternoon and night and a heavy peal of thunder and a vivid flash of lightning so frightened the old lady that she fell to the floor and died almost instantly. She had for years expressed the opinion that she would be killed by lightning during a heavy storm.

The Tenth Annual Inter-State Picnic and exhibition under the auspices of the Patrons of Husbandry of Pennsylvania, Maryland, W. Virginia, New Jersey and Delaware will open at Williams' Grove, Cumberland Co., Pa., on Monday, August 20, 1883, and continue until Saturday, August 25. Excursion rates at reduced prices will be arranged over all the principal roads in Pennsylvania and adjoining States.

A low condition of health is common with many who allow themselves to worry. Mental anguish causes bodily sufferings. Anxiety and care has broken down many constitutions. A train of disorders usually follow mental distress. Heart affection, nervousness, sleeplessness, dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney troubles, etc., are among the list. A sure remedy for relieving all mental and physical distress is Brown's Iron Bitters. It at once strengthens every part of the body making work a pleasure and care unknown.
