to to Eyebrows Made to Order. At a certain "professor's" artificial leg, arm, nose, and eyebrow factory re-cently a number of young women were, working at small tables, each table cov-ered with little instruments and things, the likes of which I had never seen beforc. At one table two girls were threading needles with fine, silky hair, and sewing them in little squares on a thin transparent gauze.

"These girls," said the professor, "are making some of those beautiful arched cycbrows you may sometimes see in ballrooms. These sewed on the net are the less expensive kind, and are only used on special occasions. The real brow is very expensive, and can only be made by a person of great skill." begged him to explain the operation of giving a person eyebrows who was born without them, and, leading me into an elegantly-furnished parlor, in which was a large dentist's chair, he contin-

"The patient sits here. In this cushion to my left are stuck a score or so of those needles you saw being threaded. Each stitch only leaving two strands of hair, to facilitate the operation a number of needles must be at hand. As each thread of hair is drawn through the skin over the eye it is cut so that when the first stage of operation is over when the first stage of operation is over it leaves the hair bristling out an inch or so, presenting a ragged, porcupine appearance. Now comes the artistic work. The brow must be arched and cut down with the utmost delicacy and a number of hours is required to do

"It must be very painful and tedi-

"They don't say that it is a picnic excursion," laughed the Professor; "but eyebrows, small as they are, are very important in the make-up of the face.—You have no idea how odd one looks when utterly denuded of hair over the eyes. The process I have described is painful, but it makes good eyebrows and adds 100 per cent. to the looks of a person who was without them. It is, too, much better than the blackening and cosmetics so many people use, especially people who have mere presence of brows, comprising only a few colorless

A Pretty Irish Girl's Romance. A romantic story of love, tragedy and good fortune has just been brought to light. Amelia Graham was a young pretty Irish girl, who went to Baltimore about two years ago to make her fortune. She had been there but a short time when a wealthy old gentlemau, named John Ritchie, became smitten his sweetheart's terms, and the wedding day was set. Again the old trouble arose; his friends persuaded him not to marry in the Catholic church. This resulted in the engagement being broken, and the young girl was per-suaded to return to Ireland. Then he began writing to her, requesting her to return and marry him. Accordingly she Pennsylvania Agricultural Works, York, Pa.

Two days after the wedding, from some unknown cause Ritchie committed suicide by blowing his brains out, and the young widow was left with a large fortune. She crossed the ocean again, and after a short time on the Emerad isle, recently came back to America, and it is announced now will in a few days marry a wealthy manufacturer of pretty-looking girl, apparently about eighteen years of age, while riding in a horse car the other day was greatly annoyed by a well-dressed young man who was determined to scrape an acquaintance with her. The young man was of the "masher" class, and only had his good clothes and his impudence to recommend him-two qualities which often go together, and which were not passports to the young lady's sociability. The masher had taken a seat by her side, although there was room enough for him to have maintained a respectful distance. He tried to engage her in conversation by asking about the residences as they rode along, but the girl, thoroughly annoyed and vexed at his familiarity, would simply give the names of the owners and relapse into silence. But the masher, nothing daynets silence. But the masher, nothing dauntsilence. But the masher, nothing daunted by the curt answers, kept on with his questions. Finally they neared the fine residence which Mr. W. P. Husband purchased a few months ago on Wethersfield Avenue, and the rude fellow, after remarking on the beauty of the place, asked the girl if she knew the owner. The girl's eyes sparkled with a owner. The girl's eyes sparkled with a mischievous twinkle, and she blushed Is the BEST BUILT.

Cincinnati, July 4 .- A horrible fatal Cincinnati, July 4.—A horrible fatal accident occurred on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railway, at Winton Place crossing, just north of Spring Grove cemetery, at 9:15 o'clock last night, whereby six persons were instantly killed. The "Thunder-Bolt" express, coming south on the New York, Pennagles and Object allegad, due here at sylvania and Ohio railroad, due here at 8:30 o'clock, and half an hour behind time, while running fast to make up lost time, struck a buckster wagon, in which were a family of six persons and a driver. Every one except Wm. Birtsch, the driver, was killed. Birtsch escaped with serious though not fatal injuries. The wagon was broken to splinters. The family was that of Henry Kracke, and they were going to their furm, seven miles from Winton Place. Kracke, his wife and four children—John, Annie, Maggie and Lizzie, aged nineteen, sixteen, thirteen and seven, respectivelywere killed

The bodies of the victims were thrown in fragments on the grass by the roalside, where they were picked up by the light of lanterns and brought to the city. Mrs. Kracke's head was severed from her body, and all the victims of the dis-aster were horribly mutilated.

A North Carolina girl has been struck by lightning twice, has been on the train when it was attacked by robbers twice, has been apparently drowned once and met with numerous accidents with horses, and still she is hale, hearty, free of the bonds of matrimony and ready for all the accidents of life.

The complicated diseases brought on by The complicated diseases brought on by intense study, thought, care, auxiety, etc., are often of the most serious nature. Heed such symptoms as loss of memory, universal lassitude, heart disease, kidney complaints, liver troubles and ageneral breaking down of health and strength. When thus afflicted, when the least exertion causes great fatigue, when life seems a burden, use the reliable strengthening tonic, Brown's Iron Bitters. It will afford you sure relief.
