

SOME OF THE BARGAINS IN 1880

Ex-Senator Stephen W. Dorsey is not yet satisfied with the present administration for its course in forcing him to a trial in the Star Route cases, and he is telling more of the bargains that were made in 1880. The New York Sun of the 10th contained a lengthy statement obtained from Dorsey giving a few of the troubles of Garfield in the late Presidential campaign. After telling of Garfield's meeting with the wealthy New Yorkers of Fifth avenue and bargaining if they would furnish a large campaign fund to give them the appointment of Secretary of the Treasury, and also agreeing in writing to give a syndicate that these men might name the refunding of the government five and sixes, which would have allowed a very profitable commission, Dorsey goes on and tells how Indiana was carried in October, 1880, as follows:

"It really seems as though the party were now getting ready to fight a battle. There had been some doubt about that before. Within a week after the Fifth avenue conference, Wall street had subscribed a very large amount of money not far from a half a million dollars. At the same time began that remarkable and, at the time, unexplained zeal which the old Stalwart leaders suddenly took in the Republican canvass. Grant, Conkling, Don Cameron took hold, and the political temperature sprang from zero to fever heat. These three leaders made their memorable visit to Garfield at Mentor, and Grant and Conkling took the stump. In constant communication with Garfield, Dorsey began to organize for an October victory in Indiana. The eye of the public being distracted by the splurging and hurrah-boys styles of campaigning that followed the Fifth avenue conference. Dorsey had abundant opportunity to put into operation, without being detected, the plan of campaigning in Indiana that afterwards won the battle, and which brought from Garfield those expressions of thanks and grateful acknowledgements which Dorsey now has in his possession.

Dorsey's plan involved the most thorough canvass of the state of Indiana that had been made since the vigorous days of O. P. Morton. Every voter was enrolled and the first canvass showed that of the work it is not necessary to speak, except to say that it won for Dorsey the loudest praises from those who knew what he had done, and caused Garfield to speak of him as a "prodigy of political ability."

In the latter part of September, after Dorsey's organization had been perfected, and the influences that could be brought to bear on each voter had been thoroughly learned a special messenger left New York for Indianapolis. He had with him over four hundred thousand dollars, either in cash or in convertible paper. This money had all been raised in New York, and principally by the efforts of Levi P. Morton. Dorsey never touched a penny of the money, though urged to see its distribution personally. He was there not only to see to it that his plan of organization was followed to the letter, but also to prevent, so far as possible, any of the money from sticking in the pockets of men who were trusted to distribute it. When the money reached the local committees it was found to be largely in crisp, new $2 bills. It is believed that Mr. John C. New could tell how bills and drafts of large denomination were converted into these small bills. At all events there they were. They were distributed through the State just as ballots were, in great bunches. The destination of each was perfectly well known, and by noon of the election day they had fallen like snowflakes silently all over the state, although more in some parts than in others.

Then came the count of polls in the evening. The $2 bills and the $432,000, combined with Dorsey's plan of organization, had won. The Democratic party was snowed under by greenbacks, and a great hurrah went up all over the land among Republicans that the principles of the party had triumphed in Indiana. The Fifth Avenue Hotel conference was a success, and Dorsey was admired and congratulated. Garfield, Arthur, James MacVaugh and other Republican leaders knew at the time what had been done and all vied in doing Dorsey honor.

DISASTROUS CYCLONE IN SOUTHERN MINNESOTA.

THREE PERSONS KILLED.
 A dispatch from Monticello, Dodge county, Minn. says:—"This county was struck by an awful cyclone on 22nd about noon, which for widespread destruction rivals anything of the kind ever known in this region. Mr. Duntley's house and barn, three miles north of Monticello, were demolished and Mr. Duntley instantly killed, while his wife was fatally injured. The residence of E. Little, occupied by H. Harding's family, was blown down, killing Miss Fay South and severely injuring two of Mr. Harding's children. The residence of Mr. Middleton, one mile north of Byron, was blown to pieces and Mrs. Middleton instantly killed. Three horses and one mule were also instantly killed. Many other barns and houses were blown down and people injured.

SAD ENDING OF AN EXCURSION—Seventy Persons Drowned.

Baltimore, July 24.—One of the most appalling calamities that has ever happened in this vicinity occurred at North Point Tivoli excursion resort, about sixteen miles down the river. About two hundred people had gathered out near the end of the long pier for the purpose of getting on the excursion barge to return to the city, when the wharf broke and over one hundred of them were precipitated into the water, which was at least ten feet deep. Sixty-five of them were drowned. The wildest excitement followed the giving way of the bridge. Men, women and children went down together, and after them jumped numbers of brave men who made desperate efforts to save some of the perishing people. All was confusion, and in their efforts to save some of drowning ones, it is thought that several of those who went to the rescue also lost their lives.

As one after another of the bodies were brought to the surface and landed, the grief of their friends was pitiful to witness. Husbands saw their wives and little ones brought up cold and lifeless. Others discovered their sisters among the mass of bodies. Some who thought that their dear ones were lost fairly danced with joy when they discovered them among the saved, while others looked in vain to find their friends or relatives among the living throng. Strong men and weak women fainted away at the horrible sight, and the scene on the wharf just after the accident beggars description.

The Susquehanna Smelting and Mining Company's smelting works are in successful operation at Sunbury. The first run of lead was made on Thursday of last week.

SNATCHED FROM THE GRAVE.

My wife was at the brink of the grave. She had been given up to die by three of Allegheny City's best physicians. They all pronounced her disease Consumption. Her finger-nails and lips were blue; was pulseless at the wrist; we were all called upon to witness her death. At this moment a neighbor brought in Dr. Hartman, who prescribed a teaspoonful of Peruna every hour. She improved from the first dose, and in a week she was up, and now (less than six months) she is well. See page 30 in the "Illumination," a book you can get gratis from your Druggist. If not address Dr. Hartman, Osborn, Ohio, or T. S. EBERLEIN, South Chicago, Ill.

PROCLAMATION:

Know all men by these presents that Valentine's Store Co. (Limited) have opened up the finest stores in Central Penn'a. They have always conducted business on the One Price System. It has been noticed of late that others have been trying to follow in their footsteps, from what they understand this is not by any means carried out by those who claim so to do. Their goods, as the public is aware of, have always been marked in PLAIN figures, followers have also sprung up to do this. Valentine's Store Co., Limited, being criterions of how to conduct a successful business, they are happy to lend their ideas for the help of human kind. They do not advertise any special prices, but from reductions made by some houses customers would conclude that the profits before reduction must have been something ENORMOUS. The public will always find Valentine's Store Co's, Limited, goods marked in PLAIN figures to the lowest notch; their prices will compare at the START to the reduced prices made by others. You must always take into consideration that there are more than one quality of goods, (and that good goods are the cheapest). It is generally job or auction goods which are cut in prices. They have recently added to the extensive stock of general merchandise a line of 5 and 10 cent goods, which will well repay a call to see our all manner of USEFUL articles, too numerous to mention, from 5 to 10 cts each. Their special order system is reaching quite a magnitude, and for the benefit of those who require goods which cannot be purchased in Bellefonte they will order either from New York or Philadelphia—will give you this parting admonition: DO NOT FAIL to call upon them; it will repay the visit. They are to be found at Bush's Arcade, Corner of High & Water streets, Bellefonte, where they occupy three store rooms. Always highest prices paid for produce. 28 Jun y
