Echoes of the Storm-Disasters at Various Points. New York, Sept. 14.-The disastrous effects of the storm which has prevailed on Long Island for the last forty-eight hours is only too plainly visible, Widespread damage has been caused by the wind on both land and water. A large amount of wreckage is floating in the water, off Greenport and Sag harbor. Many of the farmers in Queens and Suffolk counties have had their winter crop of corn levelled to the ground and mined by the wind, which blew almost a huricane. The damage to the corn is estimated at several thousand dollars. The apple crop has also suffered serious damage. The tide in the bays and harbors along the Sound shore rose higher than has been known in nearly ten years in the month of September. Upward of fifteen feet of the beach was washed away at Far Rockawy. Bathing houses and other small cutbuildings were lifted like tinder by the waves and carried far out to sea.

Fifteen Vessels Ashore. NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 14.-News from Smithville, Va., gives the maximum velocity of the wind as ninety-seven miles. Fifteen vessels are ashore and three pilot boats sunk. The telegraph wires are down and the names of the stranded vessels cannot be yet ascertained correctly. All along the coast from Hatteras evidences of the storm may be seen. Federal Point is thought to have been in danger of a deluge. Steamers have made for the fort to get the women and children off to a place of safety without success, but those most likely to be best informed on the subject think they were enabled to place themselves out of danger's way.

Steamers in the Gale, WILMINGTON, N. C., Sept. 14.—The steamship Regulator, five days out from New York, has reached her wharf. She passed through the gale finely, losing only some of her head sails. Captain Donne, of the Regulator, reports that the Frying Pan Shoals light ship has gone from her moorings, and fears are entertained that she has foundered. The steamship Benefactor, which left here for New York on Saturday, and the steamwill make port safely.

NEW JERSEY'S GOVERNOR.

Wild Excitement at the Convention -The Platform.

TRENTON, Sept. 14.—The Democratic State convention has nominated Leon Abbett for governor. There was wild excitement. Atbright's followers made a determined fight against the nominee and scenes of confusion followed. On the first ballot Abbett received Albright lost 10 votes in his own county (Essex), and this quickly turned the tide. The delegations which had already voted began to change for Abbett, and it was evident he had more than the requisite 319 votes. Amid wild cheers from Hudson and groans and hisses from Essex the clerk announced that Abbet had received 333 votes and Albright 138. A motion to make the nomination un animous was howled down by Essex and the galleries, and after a few minutes of cheers and hissing, during which the Essex memcars vainly tried to obtain the ear of the chair, the convention spontaneously broke up, the Essex county delegates starting first to leave the hall, swearing that they would never support the candidate.

The platform denounces the Republican party, upholds the constitution and favors a tariff for revenue sufficient to sustain the government, and protect the industries without fostering monopolies.
