The bite of the first dog was an ugly one and large pieces of flesh have fallen from the wound since. The boy was laid up from his injuries but we learn is getting well

The fatal shooting affair at Fowler's which we mentioned in last week's issue, was accidental. The Styers boys were out with a hunting party, and seeing a rabbit, the older one aged about 22, took into the bushes after it, followed by his younger brother aged about 12, whose gun was accidentially discharged, the load of buckshot taking effect in the thigh and abdomen of the older brother, from the effects of which he died soon after. They were sons of Luke Steyers.
