LUTHER AT CENTRE HALL.

The 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther was celebrated in the Lutheran church at Centre Hall, on last Saturday evening. The weather was unfavorable yet the church was filled with people.

The ladies built up an embankment of flower plants in front of the pulpit which extended over it and covered the platform -the varied hues of the flowers, presenting a charming appearance. In the niche back of the pulpit was a large de-sign on dark canvass, 4x5 feet, on which were sketched representations of the notable events in the life of the great Reformer; the Wartburg formed the central figure, Worms, Eisleben, and other important points, with appropriate lettering and mottoes, and dates of events, were plainly drawn, the whole forming a pleasing as well as instructive and appropriate chart. The design was an en-larged copy, drawn by John T. Lee, from a miniature in print. The ladies had the chart handsomely trimmed with evergreen and golden tinsel which lent a rich star-like glitter to the design.

The right and left of the pillars back of the pulpit were flanked by life-size portraits of Luther and Melanethon, added to which were minor decorations. The services opened with "Rise, Glorious Conqueror," charmingly rendered by the choir. Prayer and other hymns followed, among these Luther's famous hymn, Ein feste Burg, which was well performed. The organ lent its strains to all the music and was presided over by J. W. Wolf. Responsive reading followed. The pastor, Rev. W. E. Fischer, then delivered a forcible and instructive address, subject, Luther and the Reformation. The next address was by D. F. Luse, subject, Luther and the Bible, by which the audience learned when, how which the audience learned when, how and under what difficulties the precious Book was found and translated by Luther. The next address was by Michael Derstine, subject, Luther and the Catechism, in which the inestimable value of this work of Luther was forcibly set forth. The next and last address was by Fred'k Kurtz, subject, Luther and the Children, in which were given the childhood of Martin and the events in his life that showed that he had great love and the catechism and Mrs. Knarr and all who witnessed their union.

The guests now proceeded to another department where the presents were arranged, among which were four costly silver pieces, one Majolica ware tea set, Japanese lamp, mirror, toilet set, white wool blankets, towels, fancy work, and a number of new and pretty designs in glassware. In short, it was a beautiful spent, and may Providence let his blessings ever rest on Mr. and Mrs. Knarr and all who witnessed their union.

The guests numbered about 86, including representatives from Lewisburg, Lewistown, Centre Hall and State College. At exactly 12 o'clock the bridal party were escorted into the parlor and the ceremony performed by Rev. George Hunter, of Lewisburg. We speak of this as being one of the most agreeable and impressive ceremonies we ever witnessed. After this congratulations were in order and fully half an hour was spent before these had ended. Dinner was then served and 27 persons seated to a table Subscribers who will look on their labels and remit the amount due, or at least a part, will do us a great favor, as we are short in funds.
