Sorry for Doing It.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 1.—John Congrove, the driver who was so terribly wounded by Shafer on a street car, is dead, and William Swift, the conductor, lies in a very precarious condition and will probably die. Shafer, the murderer, refused to talk upon the subject until last night, when he stated that he had been drinking but that he was not at all intoxicated. He said that he and the conductor quarreled about the fare, and the latter threatened to put him off. When the turntable was reached both the conductor and driver attacked him. He defended himself as well as he could, but finding that he was being beaten, he drew his revolver and fired. As soon as he realized what he had done he returned home on foot. There he shaved off his moustache and side whiskers, so as to alter his appearance as much as possible. He seems to be sorry for what he has done, but says that he was justified. Shafer bears a good reputation.
