SENATOR EDMUNDS.

The Great Vermont and the Presidential Candidacy.

Some of His Ideas on the Subject—The Penions Discussion—Gen. Bingham on the Postal Telegraph.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, will be fifty seven years of age on the first day of February...

Now, do not place me in that list. If my real friends desire to do me a service they will not talk about me in that connection...

There are three or four gentlemen who would make excellent candidates and any one of them an excellent president.

"President Arthur has some points of a skillful politician, a thoroughness in the details of party management, which is always a strong point in the preliminaries of organizing for active operations in a convention.

The fact of having successfully handled a convention, however, is not always necessarily the antecedent of a successful campaign.

In matters of administration the people are not to be trifled with as a century ago. In New York, for instance, there has been perhaps a more emphatic expression of this condition of public opinion than in any other state.

There are the independent, sometimes called the half breeders; then there are the friends of Mr. Conkling, called by some people the stalwarts; then there are the republicans, who stand upon the broad platform of the party—men who are influenced by no personal preferences, but are always at the post of duty when the party calls.

Now if these elements get together and go into the campaign heartily, no matter who is nominated in the opposition, there has been one yet named who on the expediency platform of the democratic party can carry the Empire state.

"The duty of the Chicago convention will be the selection of candidates to fit the party and not an effort to make the party fit the candidates.

Then there will be no difficulty about the rest of the work, for every member of the party will throw all his zeal into the contest and we will have an old time victory."

Gen. Bingham, of Pennsylvania, who was chairman of the house committee on post offices and post roads in the last congress, and who was so prominent in bringing about the reduction of letter postage, was asked this morning by a United Press reporter if he thought a postal telegraph bill would be passed by this congress...

"I hardly think it can be done by this congress, but it is only a question of a very short time when it will be done. The government ought to have lines of its own for the use of people at reasonable rates."

The house committee on rivers and harbors at a meeting today appointed a sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. Blanchard, Gibson and Henderson, to whom was referred the recommendation of the president that one million dollars be immediately appropriated for the improvement of the Mississippi river.

The prospect of passing a bill to increase the pension of soldiers who lost a limb in the late war is not regarded as among the brightest at present.

Representative Curtin, who proposed the measure, has not the slightest doubt that it will pass the house without delay, but the work of getting it through the senate is quite another thing.

The senate committee on pensions is very nearly the same as that in the last congress, which secured the amendment of the bill cutting down the proposed increase to $30 a month instead of $40.

The trouble with the bill in the last congress was proposed to allow the same increase in pensions to those who had suffered equivalent disabilities to that of the loss of an arm or leg, and the difficulty of determining the merits of such cases was what influenced the committee in amending the bill.

Had the bill provided simply that those who had lost an arm or a leg should be entitled to the increase the bill would probably have passed without trouble.

Representative Curtin's bill includes only those who lost a leg or an arm, which affects but a very few thousands upon the pension rolls, and would cause scarcely any trouble to the pension bureau, but the fact that the last congress voted an increase makes it improbable that further action will be taken so soon.

Payne Beats Pendleton.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 9.—The long and bitter fight for the senatorship has been ended by the nomination of Henry B. Payne on the first ballot. The vote stood: Payne, 48; Pendleton, 33; Ward, 9, and several other candidates one vote each.

The attendance of the entire democratic membership of both houses was noted, making a total of eighty-two votes, sixty representatives and twenty-two senators.

All persons not members were ordered out of the hall. A resolution not to adjourn until a senator was nominated was readily adopted.

After some talk about secret and open ballots, the Payne following favoring the former, a secret ballot was ordered by a vote of 53 to 25.

The names of Hon. George H. Pendleton, Henry B. Payne and Gen. Durbin Ward were presented. A ballot was immediately taken with the result above given.

Payne Asked to Decline.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 11.—The Hon. Henry B. Payne, recently nominated by the democrats for the office of United States senator, from Ohio, has received numerous petitions requesting him to decline the nomination, thereby uniting the democracy of Ohio.

Mr. Payne has not yet signified his acceptance of the nomination.

WONDERFUL REVELATIONS.

THEY SHOCK THE CIVILIZED WORLD.

But Suncams of Good Profits and Proven Blessing to All Nations—The Human People First to Receive Their English Influence.

Two of Esculapius' most distinguished sages, natives of Germany, and life long teachers of medicine, Drs. Krafft-Ernst and Sohoniwii, have been devoting their time during the past three years to comparing the effect upon diseases, what Dr. Ahn, Professor of the Metaphysical College of Boston, calls metaphysical process, with the effect of medicine.

Numerous through experiments convinced them that there was a beneficial effect in medicine except the metaphysical influence, which every physician's presence exerts over the patient, and they found this influence over disease was greater when administering sugar than when giving the medicines usually prescribed by physicians.

They did, however, notice that quinine in malarial fevers and iodide of potassium in certain specific diseases, exerted an influence over these complaints greater in degree than that of sugar. It was suggested that the various patent and proprietary medicines should be examined and compared with sugar, in the same way.

This was done and they, too, rapidly shared the same fate as the physician's drugs, excepting those containing quinine and iodide of potassium, which too showed an influence over disease similar to those drugs used by themselves, but less in degree.

The list being exhausted they finally came upon Peruna; their experiments with this article were most striking and in the highest degree exciting. Its effect could in no wise be compared with that of sugar nor with Dr. Ahn's metaphysical process. Its effect was immediate and positive, as was shown in the case of Miss Maggie Maran, of Oil City, Pa., who had been a terrible sufferer from dyspepsia, liver complaint and kidney disease, sympathetically affecting all the pelvic functions.
