THE DEMONIAC SLAYERS OF 11 SERVANT GIRLS HANGED.

Karl Scholossareke, who murdered 21 servant girls, were hanged in the court strangled to death. Schenck, his brother Carl and Schlossareke for a long time pursued the calllesians by birth, are sons af a judge, who themselves with Schlossareke, a confirmed criminal, and with several other bad class prejudices.

He would meet the girls by appointment, and, after paying court to them for a few days or weeks, induce the silly, trusting creatures to draw their money out of bank and so provided accompany him on a journey to get married. Hugo Sheack would get out at some romanue spot where he had arranged that his accomplices would be in readiness and together they would kill the girl, secure her property, conceal her body, and retare quickly to the town as if nothing had happened, to plan fresh murders and compelled to dismiss him, but in lieu of infinity and the plan fresh murders and infinity and plan fresh mu still be at large; but one of them having at Marseilles. killed a servant girl, had the andacity to take her bank book to the postoffice with the object of drawing the deposit standing to her credit. The woman had been missed. Suspicion was naturally aroused at the postoffice, and the three principal members of the firm consequently arrested.

LETTER FROM MISSOURI.

EDITOR REPORTER:—In reading David Shafer's letter, contained in your issue of the 5th instant, I was forcibly reminded of an occurrance that took place here during the late war. A company of union soldiers were passing the house of ashrewd farmer one night, and in order to ascertain his position relative to the war, one of the blue-coats bawled out: "Hurrah for the union!" No response from within the house. Completely disgusted at his failure to get the barmer to commit himself, the soldier yelled out: "Hurrah for Jeff Davis!" Sill no response from within the house. Completely disgusted at his failure to get the barmer to commit himself, the soldier yelled out: "Hurrah for h--!" Immediately the farmer opened the door and shouled: "D—n the man who won't stand up for his own country."

Now, I am a Missourian by adoption, having lived here since 1874, and I naturally feel a pride in my state,—in her institutions, her prosperity and her wealth, and for this reason I trust the readers of the "Reporter" will indulge me while I make a few aliusions to Mr. Shafer's letter. In the first place he says: "The Missouri soil in general is very shallow." So far as this statement applies to southwest Missouri I have nothing to say, but I do emphistically say that it does not apply to any section of the state lying north of the Missouri ver. It is universally conceded that north and central Missouri comprises the finest and richest agricultural lands to be found anywhere. This county (Worth) produced in 1880 the largest average yield of corn per acre of any county in the United States, as shown by the census taken that year. And as for fruit, I have never seen finer apples, peaches, cherries and grapes grown anywhere than right here. Grapes are indigenous to the soil and grow in great profusion. Nearly all his other remarks are on topics which are incidental to the settlement of every new country, and must appear so to every thoughtful man, and therefore I dismiss them. Now in relation to schools I will quote from official reco For the present year the state has apportioned among her school children the sum of $602,296, making an average of 79 cents per capits for every child of school age within her borders. This sum will be largely augmented by interest from the permanent school funds of the various counties in the state. Each county has a permanent school fund of its own, separate from and independent of the state fund. This fund is constantly growing larger. All fines and forfeitures are pard into this fund and held in trust for the use of the public school system. The law forbids the use of the principal, and only the interest thereon is applied to the maintenance of our schools. The principal is loaned to our farmers on real estate security at 10 per cent, the current rate for money in the west. The interest on this fund in our county for the present year amounts to $2,390. Now divide this last sum amangst the 3 200 school children in our county fund to 78 cents received from the state fund, and we have a total of $1.49 for each school child in the county. And it should be remembered that this amount has been raised without levying one cent of school, tax. The maximum levy for school purposes is 45 cents on the nundred dollars valuation, and this can be increased to 65 cents by a two thirds vote. In size this is the smallest county in the state, being 13x21 miles in extent, and within its borders we have 60 schools in operation.

But I have written enough. I leave to the reacter the task of discriminating between what Mr. Shafer and myself have pennech. E. S. Garver.

A CADETS FREAK.

M. Edouard Seguin, a youth of eighteen, belonging to a highly respectable family of Marseilles, (France), was recently admitted into the Military School of St. Cyr. Having taken a dislike to the Vienna, April 22.-Hugo Schenck and career of arms, he suddenly disappeared from the shool in the month of December last. Nothing was heard of him despite yard inside the prison here to-day. Atter the usual preliminaries had been gone through with the word was given and the prisoners were drawn up and slowly relatives. It seems that the past three years lived luxuriously on the Sunday he left he was to have acthe profits of blood. The Schencks, Sicompanied his companions to Paris, but on reaching St. Cloud he quitted the train, they first took to the occupation of mur- bought a felt hat, and, entering the Bois der is not known, but the authorities de Boulogne, threw aside his shake, cut have discovered that they as sciated off the buttons of his regulation overcoat, and thus disguised took the train to Calais, characters. It is not uncommon in Vienna for servants who have saved money of only 30f, he could not proceed further to advertise for husbands in the local p: than Dover, where he found himself with pers, and Hugo Shenck—a married mar, living apart from his wife—used to answer such advertisements sometimes under pretenses of being an engineer in receipt of a good salary and occasionally as man, who was struck by his appearance, a wealthy aristograf with contempt for ceipt of a good salary and occasionally as man, who was struck by his appearance, a wealthy aristocrat with contempt for took him before a magistrate as a vagabond, and, as he refused to give any account of himself, he was taken to prison. He remained there for some days, until the chaplain of the jail succeeded in eliciting his story, and at once kindly advanced him the necessary means for an having first even satisfied himself of the to carry out their regular business of inflicting punishment the Minister of War has sent him into a line regiment. ORIGIN OF WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE.

Although inferior in money-making power to a pill, a sauce, too, can make the guineas roll briskly in, and notably has this been the case with Worcestershire. A scrutiny of the label will show that it is prepared "from the recipe of a dispatch says: At eleven o'clock this nobleman of the county." The nobleman morning Jesse Gunn shot and killed his is Lord Sandys, and Messrs. Lea & Per-Wife" and other novels, well known in saw him enter his son's house and told the son, who fired on his father as the Court, when Lady Sandys chanced to retheir day, was on a visit at Ombersley mark that she wished she could get some very good curry-powder, which elicited the old stand where his from Mrs, Grey that she had in her desk friends and the public in farmers of Pennevalley know it. All the world, to its remotest ends, now buying of some other grocers you are in it is terribly pirated, an enormous trade amount to thousands of pounds a year, and I cannot but suppose that liberal checks have passed from the firm to Mrs. Grey, to whom it is so heavily indebted for its prosperity.

JEAN-LOUIS, THE FENCING-MASTER.

A quarrel between a French and an Italian regiment in the army of occupation in Spain was settled by a solemn duel between the regimental fencing-masters, and Jean-Louis, as the chief instructor of the French regiment in question, took a leading part in it with distinction. But it is much to believe that he saved his own side all trouble in the matter by himself killing or disabling 13 adversaries without once being touched. Apart from such more than Homeric feats, however, there is quite enough to make Jean-Louis an interesting person. Beginning life as an "enfant de troupe" in the armies of the first Republic, a weak-looking mulatto, without parents or friends, he gradually rose to be not only a perfect master of femce, but a master who commanded the personal respect of his pupils, comrac'es, and superior officers, and was not ur frequently consulted in affairs of importance touching personal or regimental honor. In his old age he appeased a lo ag-standing feud between the enginee rs and the infantry quartered at Montpedlier by the bold and simple device of giving a military assault of arms in his own name, inviting the picked men of t oth branches of the service to contend and the rest of the garriso n to look on, and at the end making the men a speech and, with all the authority of his position as "le pere de l'escrime," compelling them to abjure their enmity. Moreover, Jean-Louis succeeded in making so good a pupil of his daughter that she completely took the conceit out c f a young professional (a stranger to the school of Jean-Lou's) who had thought i't impossible that a woman could be a s prious ad-
