The Unknown Trials Which a Woman Endured Without Complaint---Why They Vanished.

Near the close of one of the most trying of the few hot days of the present year a pale, care worn woman might have been seen at the window of her dwelling apparently in a condition of complete exhaustion. Her efforts to meet the accumulated duties of her household had been great but unsuccessful, while the care of a sick child, whose wails could even then be heard, was added to her otherwise overwhelming troubles. Nature had done much for her and in her youthful days she had been not only beautiful but the possessor of health such as is seldom seen. But home and family duties and the depressing cares which too eften accompany them had proven greater than her splendid strength and she felt at that moment not only that life was a burden but that death would be a grand relief. This is no unusual experience. It is, in fact, a most common everyday occurrence, and a great prayer is constantly ascending from thousands of homes for deliverance from the deadly power which is enslaving so many wives, mothers and daughters. And yet these duties of life must be met. No woman can afford to turn aside from the proper care of her home and the ones who are committed to her care, although in doing these duties she may sacrifice her health, and possibly life iself. The experience of one who successfully overcame such trials and yet retained health and all the blessings it bringe is thus told by Rev. William Wat son, Presiding Elder of the Methodist-Episcopal church, residing at Watertown, N. Y. He said;

"My wife became completely run down through overwork and care of a sick member of our household, and I entertained serious apprehensions as to her future. She was languid, pale, utterly exhausted, without appetite, and in a complete state of physical decline. And yet she did not could not neglect her duties. I have seen her about the house, trying courageously' to care for the ones she loved when I could tell, from the lines upon her face how much she was suffering. At times she would rally for a day or two and then fall back into the state of nervous exhaustion she felt before. Her head pained her frequently, her body was becoming bowed by pain and all hope or enjoyment in life seemed departed. What to do we could not tell. I resolved, however, to bring back her life and vitality it possible and to this end began to treat her myself. To my great relief her system has been toned up, her strength restored, her health completely recovered and wholly by the use of Warner's Tippecanoe, which I regard as the greatest tonic, invigorator and stomach remedy that has ever been discovered. I was led to use it the more readily as I had tested the health-restoring properties of Warner's Safe Cure in my own person and I therefore knew that any remedy Mr. Warner might produce would be a valuable one. I have since recommended both Warner's Tippecanoe and Warner's Safe Cure to many of my friends and I know several Doctors of Divinity as well as nu merous laymen who are using both with great benefit."

If all the overworked and duty driven women of America could know of the experience above described, and act upon the same, there can be little doubt that much of the pain, and most of the depressing influences of life might be avoided. Such truths are too valuable to remain un-

THE year '16: "And this is June, leafy June," said Mr. Smiley, as he drew on his overcoat for a morning stroll. "Never saw nothing like it since 1816, the cold summer, when there was a frost every month in the year." "Dear me, Ichabod," do let 1816 alone. I've heard more about that year, and land sakes you wasn't but four years old. What do you really remember about it?" "I was a great deal brighter at four years old-" "Than you are now," said Hannah, testily, and the old man, casting a mournful look of appreciation upon her, moved off, trying to whistle "Bonaparte's March Over the Alps" with the vigor of youth but he couldn't do it.

A NEW view: "Well, well, what makes you so glum this morning? What's happened?" was the sympathetic greeting which met a citizen the other morning. "Everything has gone to pieces. I've lost $15,000 in the last three months.' "Goodness! How I envy you." "Envy me?" was the astonishing inquiry. "Why certainly. You must have had it to lose." This put a retrospective view of the case in a new light and they went down the walk puffing their cigars slowly.

AGRICULTURE.

PLANT A FEW FRUIT TREES. -It is not yet too late to order and plant a few fruit trees or vines. They may be procured of the nearest nurseryman, and planted promptly after being brought home. A few quince and pear trees, a few apple trees, a few grape vines, if only a few, will be a help, and in a short time will produce fruit after their kind. There are many who like the early acid fruits as the strawberry, current, gooseberry, &c., and a few of each of these should be planted, if only enough for house use. Every garden or yillage lot should have a supply of fruits in variety. They are more wholesome as food than much that is eaten by villagers and townspeople, or even farmers themselves. It will not cost much to set out a small number of trees, vines and plants, and will contribute largely to the health of the family in the cultivation and caring for them as well as in eating the fruit when it is in season. Fruit should largely take the place of more solid food, especially meats, during the warm season. The only way for everybody to get a supply is for them to raise their own. It can easily be done, and that a beginning may be made or additions to that already started attend to it now, this week, immediately.

CLOVER FERTLIZER.-Two or even three crops of small grain can be raised in succession to advantage on any piece of land, provided clover is sown with every crop of small grain. Then a crop of clover is turned under for every crop of small grain except the first, and upon this hypothesis when a farmer wants to enrich his land or any one or more pieces, let him seed the land with small grain for two or three years in succession, always sowing clover in the spring and ploughing in the fail, and then if he chooses to put the land in oorn he can do so for one, or even two seasons, and then put it back in small grain and clover. After a field has had clover sown in it for say six or eight seasons, it will seed itself, and after every crop of small grain a crop of clover will spring up from the seed in the ground exposed to the action of the elements by ploughing for the crop of small grain. Another fact well known is that a crop of wheat grown on fallow ground is greater and the grain larger than that grown on corn ground.

PETROLHUM AND WOOD, -- Wood of white pine exposed fully to the weather, and treated with a wash of petroleum over sixteen years ago, says a farmer writer, remains hard and sound with about a sixth of an inch of the outside, or so far in as the oil penetrated, brown and compact, while further in the pine has the usual white appearance. The oil with its solid ingredients in solution, entered and filled the pores of the wood, and changed it both in texture and appearance to cedar. He used it first on the roof of a dwelling on the shingles of several barns; and after a lapse of sixteen years they appear to be as sound as when first laid. Where the roofs are much shaded, no moss has formed on them. One of the barns had a steep roof, from which the oil caused the snow, as soon as it accumulated in any quantity, to slide freely, and this freedom drawing the lid completely over the from heavy loads of snow continued for several years.

WE once experimented, by hauling twenty four large loads of the best manure upon two acres of clay foam land. Upon two acres more no manure was used, but it was well worked. One and a half bushels of corn were drilled per acre upon each piece, drills being sixteen inches apart. When the corn was ready to cut the unmanured two acres stood eighteen inches higher than the manured piece. The manured piece gave twenty-two tons per acre, and the other twenty-eight tons. The excellence of the unmanured piece was due to the a larger growth," and "Through thick | ... fact that it was cultivated till the soil was as fine as a garden bed four mehes was the tug of war."-Nathaniel Lee deep, and the cost of the extra labor was only $2.50 per acre. It is, therefore, hair renewer, known the world over in apparent, that the first consideration in 1883. furnishing food for plants is thorough cultivation.

Make a brine about hot enough to bear inches deep. Take from the tin care the hand in it, and strong enough to fully, and frost thickly over the top hold up an egg on the surface. Steep | with boiled frosting in which, directly the wheat or corn in this ten to fifteen after taking it from the stove, have minutes, stir it up well, and skim off all stirred English walnut meats. Chop the foul stuff that rises on top of the the meat not so fine, however, that brine. Then take out the grain and they may not be readily distinguished. spread it on boards out-doors, or on the Cut in pieces about two inches wide barn floor, and dry the seed by sprink- and four long. For the cake itself use ling slacked lime, plaster-of-paris, or any good white cake receipt. Flavor ashes over it, sufficient to give it a white with lemon or vanilla, coating. This prevents the kernel from sticking together when sowed. Plant or sow the next day or two if possible, because, if suffered too dry to hard, the grain might not germinate after being swollen in the brine. The brine kills the smut, and, aside from assisting to dry the seed, the lime, etc., sprinkled on it act as a slight fertilizer.

MR. M. E. HINKLEY, a practical horticulturlist, writing about strawberries says that there are no settled rules which may be given the beginner that will hold good in all localities, but that there are certain general rules which should always be borne in mind, to wit-thorough culture, a moist situation, careful watching and a love for the business, Mr. Hinkley further theorizes in this way. The inmate longing for strawberries is either a human weakness or redeeming instinct, It is the triumph of gluttony, or a lingering memory of Eden. The longing is so universal that I prefer to regard it in the best light. It is the DOMESTIC.

DRIED CORN ought to be made palatable, and be frequently seen on the dinner table, but many people who like corn dislike this stuff because it is not cooked properly; it should always be put to soak in lukewarm water the afternoon of the day before it is to be eaten. Do not throw away the water in which it is soaked, or then you lose much of the best there is in the corn. Then early, at least two hours before dinner, put it in a saucepan over the fire, and let it cook slowly but steadily until it is tender, A little cream added to the milk, butter, pepper, and salt are desirable, and a teaspoonful of sugar will sometimes do wonders in giving flavor to the dish.

A Lucky Kangaroo Hunter,

One of the most daring Kangaroo hunters of Australia, and his stag hounds, were terribly lacerated by a wounded Kangaron, on the great sheep ranche of Mr. Alfred Hay, Boomanoomana, N. S. An orange basket, or a plate of orange baskets, makes a handsome decoration for the table, particularly for a birthday party or a holiday meal. Take the fruit from the peel through as small an incision as it is possible to make and yet to draw the fruit through it; then cut the skin of the orange in the shape of a little basket, with a handle. This may be filled with candy, with ice cream, whipped cream, jelly or with anything you choose. The fruit is not to be wasted by any means; it may be used for an orange pie, for marmalade or for ambrosia-that is, out in small pieces and put in a dish with a layer of cocoanut and powdered sugar between each layer of orange. This is very deliaate for dessert with ice cream and cake,

To make an appetizing beef stew, take out the bone and bind the pieces of beef tightly, putting a lemon, pared and cut in two, and some herbs in before binding. Place it in as small a stew-pan or kettle as will allow of its being covered with water. Let it cook slowly and gently; do not add any water unless absolutely necessary. Slice a large onion and fry it brown, and add to the water also any sliced vegetables you choose; or cook the vegetables in a kettle by themselves and serve on the platter with the beef. If you do not add any water you will have very rich gravy, and a portion of it may be reserved for soup stock.

MUMOROUS.

POLITICAL: "Julia" wants to know 'what a party platform is." Well a platform, Julia, is one preamble and twenty resolutions, strong in non-essentials, vague in essentials; round the bush on tariff and rough as thunder on the Mormons; clamerous for civil service reform, with a reserved definition of civil service reform; down on corruption, loud in its praise of purity and determined to have it if it takes every cent the party can raise. The platform, you undestand Julia, is a legitimate and necessary part of the campaign pomp and circumstance; it goes along with the banners, transparencies and torches, and when the campaign is over-well, it is stored away in the cellar or garret, along with the rest of the uniforms and torches. A campaign platform is very much like the campaign torch, indeed; it gives out a great deal of smell and smoke with a very uncertain, flickering light.

Somewhat puzzled: Last winter a great religious revival was held in a certain Uhio neighborhood, and several good men brought all their influence to bear on a certain farmer named Harris. After many efforts he was brought to the anxious seat, and then they had the happiness of hearing him announce that he felt himself saved, In the course of three or four days the minister met him and asked: "Well, brother Harris, how do you feet?" "Oh, kinder plaguey mean," was the reply. You do! What is the trouble? 'Well, I hadn't found the Lord over 20 minutes before 1 run across a fruit tree agent who beat me out of $15 last year. There I was, ready to fly into the gates of Heaven, and there he was, chuckling to think of how he worked off a lot of crab-apple trees on me for a new kind of pear!
