THURMAN'S FISH STORIES.

Once upon a time, when crowded about his Presidential aspirations, ex-Senator Thurman replied: "I really have no ambition in that direction." A have no ambition in that direction." A look of incredulity on every face was the only response. The judge took in these looks and related a little story : "One Summer I was at the Oakland

When I returned to Columbus, I went to the leading restau-ratear and instructed him to procure me the largest cat-fish that could possibly be and tied him to a steke. But when she ratear and instructed him to produce me the largest eat-fish that could possibly be secured. He reported in a few days that he had one. I walked over, and found an excellent specimen weighing seventy-five pounds. I had him boxed and earc-fully packed in ice, and shipped him by express to my disbelieving friends in Oakland. From the restaurateur I got all the recipes I could for cat-fish chow-
