

THE CENTRE REPORTER.

FRED. KURTZ, Editor and Proprietor.

The Reporter enters its eighteenth volume with this issue, and goes to its many readers with a wish for a happy New Year, and a hope to enjoy their company and support in the future, with our heartfelt thanks for past friendship and patronage.

The statement of the business of all the lines of the Pennsylvania Company east of Pittsburgh and Erie for the eleven months of 1884, as compared with the same period in 1883, shows a decrease in net earnings of $1,209,202. All the lines west of Pittsburgh and Erie for the eleven months of 1884 show a decrease, as compared with the same period in 1883, of $1,946,808.

The new county officers, Sheriff Miles W. Walker, Prothonotary Brett and Treasurer Chas. Smith have been sworn in and assumed the duties of their respective offices, and will no doubt render satisfaction, they are all gentlemen of competency and good character. The outgoing officers, Sheriff Dunkle, Treasurer Keller and Prothonotary Harper, served their positions well and faithfully, leaving no room for complaint as to the discharge of their duties.

Read changes in State College ad. The institution is gaining favor and rapidly rising to the front. Prof. Atherton seems to be the gentleman long needed to build up the institution. Dr. Atherton is straining every nerve—and he is a gentleman of great energy and ability—to do his duty, and it must be a source of gratification to him to find his labors not in vain. We hear no complaints, as in the past, which is the best evidence that matters for once are going right at the State College.

Notwithstanding New Haven, Connecticut, is a city of 60,000 inhabitants and is provided with water works many persons still depend on wells for their drinking water. The prevalence of typhoid fever has led to the analysis of many wells and scarcely one of them has been found free from fever germ. One of them decided pure supplies the pump on the college green; but as the students seldom drink from this, except when they get up late with headache "next morning," it does not do much toward diminishing the source of fever.

Gordonsville, Va., society is all agog over the announcement of the engagement of a juvenile pair. The local papers announce the fact that cards are out for the marriage of Mr. Willis Scott, of Gordonsville, aged four years, to Miss Jennie Perry, of Charlottesville, Va., aged six years. The young lady is a fair-haired little sprig of unusual brightness. Her father is a well-to-do business man of Charlottesville. If this union ever takes place it will attract a deal of interest on account of the tender ages of the parties.

The parents of these babies may be considered as much babies as the babies themselves.

Four years ago W. H. Vanderbilt invested fifty million dollars in United States 4 per cent. bonds, since that time he has converted eighteen million of these bonds into money. Financial men say that within the past four years Vanderbilt's fortune of two hundred millions has been cut squarely in half. In 1880 New York Central was selling at 155, Lake Shore 135, Michigan Central 112 and Canada Southern 90. Now quotations for the same stocks are 85, 61, 55 and 30 respectively. Vanderbilt's boys including his son-in-law Twombly, have lost him 15 million dollars alone in the last two years.

Relative to the extension of the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia railroad the latest intelligence states Herr Van Weel, who was sent to this country six months ago by a syndicate of bankers in Amsterdam, holding a majority of stock in the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia railroad, to make an inspection of that line, has made his report. He finds that the system is a valuable one, and advises that it be held together under all circumstances. He further states that if additional terminal facilities are built in Buffalo at a cost of $2,000,000, that more than that amount of additional business can be obtained. At a meeting of the directors recently held it was decided to sell $1,500,000 of general mortgage bonds in the treasury of the company and pay off the floating debt, which amounts to $1,480,000. This will be done as soon as certain final advice on the subject are had from Amsterdam. The directors of the company state that as soon as this can be accomplished the money will be raised to go in with the Buffalo terminals. A syndicate of capitalists have conveyed a line from Clermont, on the line of the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia, to Johnsonburg, and thence down to Brockwayville, there to connect with the low-grade road, and this when completed, it is said, will make a line twenty-two miles shorter than any other between Pittsburgh and Buffalo.

Beecher's support of Cleveland has made some trouble in the Blaine members of his church. Sunday, 27 ult., after he concluded his sermon in Plymouth church, based upon the dissimulation which existed among some of his congregants, caused by his action in the late campaign. He alluded to his forty years' pastorate and said that he never mixed politics with his theology in the pulpit. He said he did not know how far the trouble had spread but only learned it from newspapers.

If there were any pe-holders offended he did not know that. He said that his congregation should have had enough confidence in him to have taken an impetuous speech making a special plea and distort its application. As far as his political judgment and endeavors were concerned, he looked upon them with unforgotten admiration; if there were mistakes and errors, he was sorry and apologized. He did not want any dissatisfied person to sneak away. Let him come to Beecher's face and tell him he is dissatisfied and Beecher would bless him.

In relation to the pewtents, he did not care if they were dissatisfied. He had lived on a salary of $3,500 when he first became pastor and if necessary he could live upon it now. If there was a majority in the church, or a strong minority, who no longer wanted him he would go. If a great majority wished him to stay he would die with them and nothing would drive him away. If he stayed the congregation would have to receive him, not on a pitchfork, but in the palms of their hands.

E. C. Phillips, of Potters Mills, formerly Siglerville, while crossing the Seven Mountains, Thursday a week, with a load of grain, had quite an encounter with a tramp. While descending the long mountain Mr. Phillips noticed an ugly looking tramp coming up behind the wagon. After walking along for a short distance he demanded $5 from Phillips, who promptly replied that he would not get $5 from him, whereupon the tramp dealt Phillips a severe blow in the face. Fortunately he was not knocked down, and picked up a clod of frozen earth, which had fallen from the lock of the wagon, he hurled it with great force at the molester's head, falling him to the ground. This seemed to very much aggravate the knight of the road, and jumping up rushed at Phillips with an ugly looking knife. He only succeeded, however in making one cut, which penetrated through two coats, a vest and three shirts, but did not reach the flesh. At this juncture Phillips again let the tramp have a piece of frozen earth, which again felled him to the ground. This evidently seemed too warm a reception for the would-be burglar and possibly murderer, and he took to his heels down the mountain. Mr. Phillips, who is a small man, displayed considerable pluck in the above encounter, he has solemnly vowed never to cross the Seven Mountains again without a revolver.—Lewistown Free Press, 31 ult.

2000 HANDS OUT OF WORK.
Shenandoah, Pa., Dec. 27.—Bear Ridge No. 1 and 2 and station collieries near Mahanoy Plain and Indian Ridge and Plank Ridge collieries, at this place, having been selected as unprofitable, have been shut down indefinitely. This will throw out of employment over 2,000 men and boys. These collieries are owned and operated by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company and nearly $80,000 per month was paid out for wages at the two mines.

PARTING OF COMRADES.
Farewell of Chaplain Harpster.
Trenton, (N. J.) Times, of Dec. 24th, says: During the encampment of the Aaron Wilkes Post, No. 23, G. A. R., held in its handsome rooms in Dippol's building last evening, a very pleasant event took place. It was known to all that comrade, the Rev. John Harpster, would visit the Post for the first time on that occasion previous to his departure for Trenton for his new charge at Dayton, Ohio, and it was determined that a surprise was to be given to him. The Rev. Harpster, who is a beautiful gold-headed ebony haired man, having engraved on it the inscription "1884. Presented to Chaplain J. Harpster by Wilkes Post, No. 23, G. A. R., Trenton, N. J.," and in the center the inscription the Second Army Corps badge—the trefoil.

New York, January 2.—The movement for raising a hundred thousand dollars to relieve the personal effects of Gen. Grant from mortgage liability, has taken practical shape. Cyrus W. Field received from D. B. Wessens, of Springfield, Mass., a check for a thousand dollars, his contribution to the fund.

Wm. M. Rogers, of Philadelphia, entered suit against Mrs. Josephine Westcott, widow said to be worth $300,000, for breach of promise of marriage. No plea or answer was filed by the lady and the Sheriff's jury gave him $500.

"THE WORLD'S WONDERS."

As seen by the Great Tropical and Polar Explorers," is the title of a new and valuable book just published by the Historical Publishing Co. Its object is to place within the reach of all, in one elegant, finely illustrated volume, all of the achievements, discoveries, travels, and adventures of the great explorers; a history of marvellous things on earth; of strange countries and races of people; of curious animals, birds and reptiles; and of the world's great natural phenomena and curiosities. It possesses additional interest in an official history of the late Greely expedition in search of the North Pole, and is no doubt a book of standard merit and great interest. The publishers claim that it is a complete encyclopedia of exploration, discovery and adventure in all parts of the world, and as such it must possess very great interest for all classes of readers. See advertisement elsewhere.

Just so. The wise and prudent man now procures a bottle of Dr. Keebler's Celebrated English Cough Medicine and keeps it in the house to be prepared for croup and whooping-cough emergencies. It never fails. It never disappoints. Instructions for treatment of croup and whooping-cough on each wrapper. Nothing like it for colds and all lung troubles. Dissatisfied buyers can have their money refunded.

Basing his views on very wide experience, those of Sir Joseph Payton on the treatment of snake poisoning are far from encouraging: "To conceive of an antidote (as that term is usually understood) we must conceive of a substance so subtle as to follow, overtake, and neutralize the poison in the blood, and that shall have the power of counteracting or neutralizing the poisonous and deadly influence it has exerted on vital force. Such a substance has still to be found, nor does our present experience of drugs give hopeful anticipation that we shall find it." Six years ago he expressed that opinion, and it appears he has since seen no reason to modify it.

A special machine for trepanning and for boring out steel ingots up to 46 inches diameter, and to about 33 feet length, has just been completed for the great ordnance works at Elswick. It is double ended, and the ingots are bored from each end simultaneously. The boring bars are propelled by a large steel screw, and the ingot is held and rotated within a large hollow headstock. The boring bars do not revolve, but suitable stays by which the weight bearing upon the central head-stock is greatly reduced. This machine is 70 feet in length overall, is massive in construction, and weighs about 50 tons.

"I don't like to think of you marrying that young helper," said the careful father. "Why, pa, what's the matter?" asked his daughter. "Well, he seems to be pretty short of cash just now." "Oh, well, papa, this is the dull season, you know. He'll have plenty of money in a month or so." "How so?" "Why, he's going to open a planing establishment, you know."

MIRAGE OF THE SOUDAN.

Colonel Colborne, an officer attached to Hicks Pacha's ill-fated expedition, thus describes a ride in the Soudan, across the two hundred and eighty miles of desert between Berber and the Red Sea: "The camels labored through the yielding sand, sinking under their feet at every step. The mirage was intensely real. Before me lay a lake, its blue waters laughing in the sun, studded with gem like islets clad with verdure, and bordered by castles, high turrets and battlements, and again by gleaming villages and smiling hamlets—the whole scene fairy-like in its beauty, and a painful contrast to the arid sand and fierce heat and consuming thirst from which I was suffering. It is in vain that one rubs one's eyes and seeks to disabuse one's self of the illusion. The thing is there, undeniable, apparently solid and tangible; you know it is mocking you like an ignis fatuus, but the most accurate knowledge of the physical laws which govern the phenomenon will not brush it away from the retina. There is small wonder that the ignorant and inexperienced should have frequently yielded to the delusion. Life is the price paid for such a mistake.

Some years ago a company of soldiers perished from thirst in this region. Disregarding the warning of their guides, the poor fellows, fresh from Egypt, and mad with thirst, broke from the ranks and rushed toward the seeming lakes of transparent water which was presented to their eyes on all sides. They pressed on eagerly toward the ever-receding phantasm, and one by one fell prostrate to leave their bones to bleach on the sand. On another occasion a detachment was sent across the desert to Berber on its way to Khartoum. The soldiers, refusing to be checked by the guides, consumed all their water when in sight of the mountains of El-Bok, confident of their ability to reach the well. The heat was intense. The men became prostrate, and in a few hours died one by one in horrible agony. The Arabs call the mirage barah Snayon—"the devil's sea."

DIAMONDS.
An article has been going the rounds of the press, copied from a French paper, showing the power of diamonds to absorb and retain light. According to this article, it appears that a gentleman having a large diamond subjected it to the sun's rays for an hour, and afterwards removed it to a dark room, where it emitted sufficient light to render a piece of white paper visible. The tradition of this power of the diamond is very old and has been worked into romance. I think, by Bulwer. This article reminds me of an experiment of which I was an eye witness, some twenty-five years ago. Capt. Samuel Dewey, formerly well known as the man who decapitated the figure of Gen. Jackson on the frigate Constitution, while lying in Boston Harbor, called upon me one day, and, alluding to the tradition, said he had in his possession a very large diamond and would like to try the experiment. The city had a short time before introduced the fire-alarm telegraph, and we obtained permission to use their battery to obtain the desired light, which was done by placing the ends of two wires near together and running a continued stream of electricity from one to the other. Accordingly one evening we repaired to the office of the telegraph company, and after exposing the diamond to this intense electric light for fifteen minutes, the current was cut off and the room left perfectly dark, but the diamond had become quite luminous and emitted light for some ten or fifteen minutes, when it gradually faded from sight. I have never been able to obtain any satisfactory explanation of this phenomenon, but should be very glad to hear a scientific reason for it.

SILK CANNON.
The "leather" guns of old, barrels of leather bound with iron hoops, are to find an imitation in cannons of silk and steel. A German inventor proposes to wrap a steel tube with silk until a diameter is attained corresponding with the ballistic power which is required for the cannon. For any given diameter silk possesses a tenacity as great as that of the best tempered steel and has the advantage of a superior elasticity. After the tube has been made it is centred upon a lathe which turns with a great angular velocity. Above and parallel with the tube are arranged a number of spools of silk, which cover the surface in the form of a helix, by means of guides, without leaving any space between the threads. When the desired thickness has been obtained, the silk is coated with gutta percha or hardened crotchetone, in order to preserve it from air and dampness. The silk being a bad conductor of heat, the gun can be fired very often without getting hot, and it is stated that it can be more easily managed, since its weight is only one third as great as if it only were of steel.

HISTORY OF THE ROSE APHIS.

The life history of the rose aphis, small and familiar as is the insect itself, forms one of the most marvelous and extraordinary chapters in all fairy tales of modern science. Nobody need wonder why the blight attacks his roses so persistently when once he has learned the unusual provision for exceptional fertility in the reproduction of these insect plagues. The whole story is too long to give at full length, but here is a brief recapitulation of a year's generation of common aphides. In the Spring, the eggs of last year's crop, which have been laid by the mothers in nooks and crannies out of reach of the frost, are quickened into life by the first return of warm weather, and hatch out their brood of insects. All this brood consists of imperfect females, without a single male among them, and they all fasten at once upon the young buds of their native bush, where they pass a sluggish and uneventful existence in sucking up the juice from the veins on the one hand and secreting honeydew upon the other. Four times they moult their skins, these moults being in some respects analogous to the metamorphosis of the caterpillar into chrysalis and butterfly. After the fourth moult the young aphides attain maturity, and then they give origin, parthenogenetically, to a second brood, also of imperfect females, all produced without any fathers. This second brood brings forth in like manner a third generation, asexual as before, and the same process is repeated without intermission as long as the warm weather lasts. In each case the young simply bud out from the ovaries of the mothers, exactly as new crops of leaves bud out from the rose branch on which they grow. Eleven generations have thus been observed to follow one another rapidly in a single Summer; and indeed by keeping the aphides in a warm room, one may even make them continue their reproduction in this purely vegetative fashion for as many as four years running. But as soon as the cold weather begins to set in, perfect male and female insects are produced by the last swarms of parthenogenetic mothers; and these true females, after being fertilized, lay the eggs which remain through the Winter, and from which the next Summer's broods have to begin afresh the wonderful cycle. Thus, only one generation of aphides, out of 10 or 11, consists of true males and females; all the rest are false females producing young by a process of budding.

WOMEN IN THE ROYAL NAVY.

In 1812 her Majesty's ship Swallow fought two French vessels off Frejus. It was on June 16, and after a most obstinate action she succeeded in driving them both in under the batteries of the town. The following anecdote, as narrated by one of the officers of the Swallow, is told at some length in the Naval Chronicle, xliii. 196: "In the gallant and sanguinary action there was a seaman named Phelan, who had his wife on board. She was stationed—as is usual when women are on board in time of battle—to assist the surgeon in the care of the wounded. From the close manner in which the Swallow engaged the enemy, yardarm and yardarm, the wounded, as may be expected, were brought below very fast; among the rest, a messmate of her husband, (consequently her own,) who had received a musket ball through the side. Her exertions were used to console the poor fellow, who was in great agonies and nearly breathing his last, when by some chance she heard her husband was wounded on deck. Her anxiety and already overpowered feelings could not one moment be restrained; she rushed instantly on deck and received the wounded tar in her arms. He faintly raised his head to kiss her; she burst into a flood of tears, and told him to take courage, 'All would yet be well,' but scarcely pronounced the last syllable when an ill-directed shot took her head off. The poor tar, who was closely wrapped in her arms, opened his eyes once more, then shut them forever. Phelan and his wife were sewed up in one hammock, and it is needless to say, buried in one grave." The narrator adds to the pathos of the above story telling how, only three weeks before, a fine boy had been born to them, and how poor Tommy fared until they put into Port Mahon. The sailors agreed "he should have a hundred fathers, but what could be the substitute of a nurse and a mother?" Happily, there was a Maltese goat on board which proved as tractable and faithful to its charge as the immortal dumb foster mother of Roman story. In Rodney's battle with De Guichenon off the Pearl Rock, Martinique, April 17, 1780, there was a woman on board the Sandwich, Rodney's flagship, who "fought a 24-pounder gun, and afterward attended the whole night upon the wounded men."
