THE CLOVER TEA CURE.

United States Senator Stanford, of California, says the cure of Gen. Grant is owing to the use of clover tea for the past four weeks. Among the numerous letters received by Mrs. Grant suggesting various remedies, clover tea was urged by the majority of the writers, and this so influenced her that she finally insisted on giving it a trial at once.

CASTOR OIL.

One of the chief uses to which castor oil is now put is that of dressing and softening leather for boots. It was formerly used for dosing children whose stomachs were disordered.

EXECUTION OF A YOUNG RED-SKIN ACCORDING TO CHOCTAW CUSTOM.

Fort Smith, Ark., May 7.—Michael Anderson, a Choctaw Indian, 17 years old, was executed yesterday, according to the custom of that nation, for the murder of another Choctaw boy named Winchester last summer.

AN ENTERPRISING AND RELIABLE HOUSE.

J. Zeller & Son, Bellefonte, can always be relied upon, not only to carry in stock the best of everything, but to secure the agency for such articles as have well known merit, and are popular with the people, thereby sustaining the reputation of being always enterprising, and ever reliable.

A BATTLE NEAR BATTLEFO' RD.

In which Fifty of Pound-Maker's Indians Were Killed. Saskatchewan Landing, N. W. T., May 5.—A mail courier has just arrived from Battleford with the following dispatch, dated May 3:

AN ANSWER WANTED.

Can any one bring us a case of kidney or liver complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they will, as thousands of cases already permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove.

A RENOVATED BREWER ARRESTED.

Renovo, May 4.—United States Marshal Martin, of Williamsport, arrested Luke Binder and closed his brewery this morning for frauds on the United States revenue law. Binder has been a brewer here for 15 years. He was taken to Williamsport this afternoon for a hearing.

Can you tell who is in the greatest danger of catching any infectious or epidemic disease? Why, you say, "the person whose blood is in an impure or impoverished condition. Such people take special complaints as dry grass bursts into flames before the sparks of a locomotive. Pure blood is a defence; it means safety, and Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the mildest, safest and surest purifier of the blood. Our chief dangers are within ourselves."

Edward Wood, of Eau Claire, Mich., was instantly killed by lightning, the other day, while at breakfast. His wife and babe, who sat opposite at the table, were uninjured.

The secret art of beauty lies in cosmetics, but it is only pure blood and a healthy performance of the vital functions, to be obtained by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

MEN OF GREAT STATURE.

It was once a much debated question whether the average human stature had been diminishing or increasing. The praisers of past men and times had no difficulty in imagining that in the earlier periods every man was six feet upwards and every woman five feet ten, and till science came with its measuring apparatus they had the best of the argument. There is little dispute now on the subject, chiefly because statistics, coats of armor and feats of strength have finally settled that, with great exception, men of all places, epochs and breeds have kept very much at the same level. The Hottentot and the Laplander have been always dwarfish, and the Caucasian, through the whole gamut of history, has been handsome and stately. That giants are exceptional in a very peculiar sense is shown by the fact that they grow as often among people not distinguished for more than average stature as among the taller nations. A Scotch professor once fell on the plan of measuring all his students and noting nationalities, so that he might get some idea as to which of the peoples were tallest. He found that Americans, especially those from the West, were first in this odd competition, Irishmen next, the Scotch next, and the English shortest of these four peoples. But it would have been no surprise to him if more men of really gigantic size could be found in England than anywhere else, because no rule of average seems to exist for such products. The Chinese giant Chang could hardly be said to owe his height to any sort of contagion of examples to be met with in the land of the Celestials. Geology has rather refused to allow that there were times when giants formed the rule and not the exception. Those days must have been farther before the food than naturalists can intellectually focus. It is quite another point whether physical inquiries are at all raised by the prehistoric assumption about a regularly tall section of the human family. There is now little doubt at all that within historical periods the race has kept its uniformity so well, that the rule is only the better established by the occasional appearance of these heroes of the flesh. It is also true that with the aid of modern intellect and appliances there is not at all the old impressiveness in the giant as such. That he needed intellect to be formidable was a great discovery for the normalists. When minds were simpler and less ready of fence, the man above six feet, with or without armor, had a natural supremacy, and his importance increased with the length of leg and arm. On this aristocracy of physical preponderance the sentence of Iahobad has long since been passed, and like Samsoun after his hair was cut off, the giants of civilized life, even if reaching the seventeen feet four inches of the French giant of Aagers, are quite like other men in essential significance.

THE KINGS OF LITTLE POPO.

The correspondent of the Cologne Gazette on the Cameroons River gives some interesting particulars of a visit to four of the African "kings"—Quadjo, Quadjovi, Foll, Ajoda and Lawson—in the Little Popo district. Each of these so-called kings claims to be ruler of the district, and has a number of partisans who profess allegiance to him; but, notwithstanding this rivalry, they usually live at peace with each other. The correspondent's first visit was to Quadjo, an old man nearly 90 years of age, whom he found lying on a bed with the whole of one side of his body paralyzed. He passed the earlier part of his life in Brazil, and has a great reputation on the coast for integrity and energy, but was so prostrated by illness when the correspondent saw him that he could only point with a melancholy look to his paralyzed side. Quadjovi is only a few months younger than Quadjo, and the correspondent had to wait while he was dressing to receive him. His costume was a toga, a white cap like those worn by women in Europe, and on the top of a lilac-covered chimney-pot hat. Notwithstanding this grotesque dress he looked very "dignified," and addressed some very polite questions to his visitor about the health of Emperor William. In the afternoon the correspondent went to Lawson, who received him in a gray hat, a sky-blue toga, top boots and white stockings. He was accompanied by a suit of about thirty negroes, who laughed uproariously when he made a joke. After a conversation, and formal greeting, which consisted mainly in an exchange of compliments, the correspondent proceeded to Gredji, the residence of the fourth "king," Foll Ajoda. He wore a white toga, a nightcap with a white silk hat on it, and Roman sandals on his bare feet. Although it was nearly sunset, Foll Ajoda ordered a tattered umbrella to be opened and held over his head during the interview, and after it was over he treated his visitor to some bottled beer.

The bay of Hava is said, by the geographers, to be the finest in the world. It is in the shape of a man's hand, the opening into the sea corresponding to the wrist, and the fingers being represented by bays or inlets stretching in all directions. But in this magnificent haven there is not and never has been, pier, quay or dock or any place for a vessel to land. All the loading and unloading of passengers, or cattle, is done by means of small lighters.

FACTS ABOUT CASABIANCA.

Few but know the pretty piece of poetry by Mrs. Hemans, "Casabianca," commencing, "The boy stood on the burning deck." The poetess states that the lad was the son of the admiral commanding the flagship L'Orient, which took fire and exploded; that young Casabianca perished in the explosion, refusing to quit the position allotted to him by his father, pending the battle of the Nile. I have been looking into the official account of the incident. The admiral was Brueneys, who was wounded in the head and hand early in the action. He continued to give orders until cut in two by a cannon ball; he uttered the request to be allowed to expire on deck, which he did in the course of some minutes. Citizen Casabianca, the father of the poetic hero, then took command; his son was a mid-dy, but only aged 10, not 13. At that period lads entered the navy very young. Casabianca was also a deputy. Pending the action his son was at his side; the father was mortally wounded in the head by a splinter and became insensible; he gave no injunctions to his son, but the latter would not the less quit his wounded parent. By this time the ship was on fire. Several of the sailors had left and saved themselves on spars till picked up by the English boats. Aided by the purser young Casabianca and his father were lowered down on a piece of mast floating by, but they had only got a short distance from the 120-gun Orient when she blew up, and nothing more was seen of the Casabiancas.

THE GIFT OF TONGUES.

"It is a noticeable fact," said a famous linguist "that, with the exception of the Russians, Americans have greater facility for learning and speaking foreign languages with correctness and fluency than any other nation. An Englishman seldom, if ever, learns to speak any other language than his own; even educated Germans speak English well, but French never. Frenchmen seldom accomplish either English or German. Italians and Spaniards always speak French well, German never and English rarely. I have often heard American girls who spoke French charmingly and murdered their own language, and I have met Americans to whom all foreign languages remained a sealed book. Greek would be as easy for them to speak as French. A specimen of this somewhat translated 'Ris de Veau a la Financiere'—a very good dish, by the way—as 'Smiles of veal at the house of the female banker!' and another, wishing to be very French, said of Mr. Dion Boucicault that he 'travelled a la prince,' and always took his 'cassinet' (spelled as pronounced) with him."

If a man spends the money he ought to save to pay his debts, when he knows very well he can only pay his debts by saving, he may give what he buys right and left with an open hand, and it will be to his own shame.
