The Epidemic of Crime.

From these anatomical data, M. Luys deduces some interesting and practical conclusions, and explains by them the symptoms of vertigo and faintness, for example, which feeble persons experience when suddenly rising from a horizontal position. He suggests whether the pains of meningitis may not be due to an interference with these normal movements, and urges the value of giving the brain the change produced by a horizontal position at night.

The cause of the movement of glaciers is still to some extent a disputed question. It was formerly claimed by some that ice is of a viscous nature, like tar, and flows under the influence of gravitation, like any similar substance; but experiments have shown that, while ice can be bent in any direction, it cannot be drawn out, but always breaks when pulled apart. So, when a glacier falls of Canton flannel. over a cliff, it does not flow smoothly over, but is broken up into separate fragments, which reunite again on reaching a more level part of the valley. It is probable that the motion of a glacier is due to the principle of regelation, along, while the ice is being continually soft leather and rouge. broken apart and pressed together again, thus adapting itself to all the windings and inequalities of the valley in which it flows.

Dr. Hamberg, a Swedish chemist, agrees with Dr. Schloesing that marine water contains neutral carbonates, bi-carbonates and slight traces of free carbonic acid, and that temperature and atmospheric pressure have a complex influence on both the uncombined gas and that which is united to bases.

The oft repeated question, whether plants in bedrooms are injurious to the ealth of its occupants, has recently been in discussion by an association of pharmacists in Paris, whose conclusion is that the presence of plants is beneficial, particularly to persons suffering from pulmonary consumption. The ozone has a good effect. Plants without flowers, however, are pronounced preferable to those in bloom.

The following is given as a cheap mode of rendering fabrics uninflammable: Four parts of borax and three parts of sulphate of magnesia, and shak-en up together just before being re-quired. Into the resulting solution the articles to be protested from fire are immersed, and when they are thoroughly soaked they are wrung out and dried preferably in the open air.

Hillouis, Hemittent, Intermittent and Malarial Fevers, are prevalent throughout the United States, particularly in the valleys of our great rivers and their vast tributaries during the Summer and Autumn, especially during seasons of unusual heat and dryness.

There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to Dr. J.
